REPORT ON THE J. HOWELL EVANS COLLECTION OF
MEDICAL PRINTS

The Howell Evans collection contains about 1200 prints. It is difficult to give an exact figure because the collection is not in any order at the present time, but is disposed in various loose packets, folders and boxes. There are a number of duplicates and triplicates, but many of these represent different states of the print, i.e. some are proof plates before letters.

There is a typed catalogue of the collection extending to 92 pages. This is an exact copy of a rough manuscript catalogue made by Mr. Howell Evans. This catalogue lists between 800 and 900 items. It deals only with portrait prints. There are many errors, particularly in regard to the names of the persons portrayed, but the entries are quite sufficient for all purposes of identification.

The collection contains examples of the various types of prints (mezzotints, line, etchings, lithographs and stipple). Approximately 56 of the finest mezzotints are framed and glazed.

The condition of the prints is, on the whole, very good, but in the conditions in which they are being kept at the present, they will inevitably suffer some damage unless they are given proper attention.

By far the most important part of the collection consists of engraved portraits of British medical men. This is a very comprehensive collection which will bear comparison with all but the largest collections known to me. Practically all the important figures in British medicine are represented. The mezzotints are very fine and are nearly all in first class condition.

There are a large number of prints taken from such works as Pettigrew's Medical Portrait Gallery,

MEMORANDUM OF THE V. HENNINGSEN COLLECTION OF
MEDICAL PRINTS

The Howell Evans collection contains about 1800 prints. It is difficult to give an exact figure because the collection is not in any order at the present time, but is disposed in various loose packets, folders and boxes. There are a number of duplicates and triplicates, but many of these represent different states of the print, i.e. some are proof plates before letters. There is a typed catalogue of the collection extending to 92 pages. This is an exact copy of a rough manuscript catalogue made by Mr. Howell Evans. This catalogue lists between 800 and 900 items. It deals only with portrait prints. There are many errors, particularly in regard to the names of the persons portrayed, but the entries are quite sufficient for all purposes of identification.

The collection contains examples of the various types of prints (mezzotints, line, etching, lithographs and stipples). Approximately 50 of the finest mezzotints are framed and glazed.

The condition of the prints is, on the whole, very good, but in the conditions in which they are being kept at the present, they will inevitably suffer some damage unless they are given proper attention.

By far the most important part of the collection consists of engraved portraits of British medical men. This is a very comprehensive collection which will bear comparison with all but the largest collections known to me. Practically all the important figures in British medicine are represented. The mezzotints are very fine and are nearly all in first class condition.

There are a large number of prints taken from such works as Pettigrew's Medical Portrait Gallery.

Layland's Contemporary Medical Men, Kay's Edinburgh Portraits and from the Gentleman's Magazine and the European Magazine.

There are a number of early photographs of British medical men made by the London Stereoscopic Co.

There are several bundles of portraits of foreign medical worthies, comprising quite a good representative collection of early prints. Many of these are taken from Sambucus' Icones (1603) and there are also a few good mezzotints and line engravings. The total number of foreign portraits is, however, quite small, and it seems obvious that the British portraits represent Mr. Evans' main interest. There are no portraits of 19th century French or German medical men.

One bundle contains engravings of notorious quacks such as Valentine Greatrakes, Joshua Ward, and Chevalier Taylor.

Apart from portraits, there are a few of the well-known subject prints. These include two or three of Teniers' pictures of Barber-Surgeons and quacks in action, a fine mezzotint of Rembrandt's Anatomy, the Siege of Warwick Lane, and some caricatures. There is also a set of the Vanity Fair Cartoons of 19th century medical men by "Spy" and "Ape" - apparently complete and with the accompanying biographical sketches. There are no Rowlandsons or Gillrays. There are no topographical prints i.e. pictures of medical colleges, hospitals and the like.

There were several bundles of pictures of pathological and operation specimens, presumably made by or for Mr. Evans. They include a number of water colours and, in some cases, are accompanied by the relevant notes.

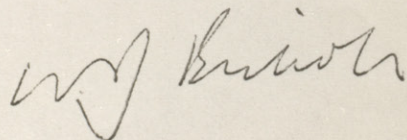

In addition to the prints, there is a framed painting of Thomas Linacre, dated 1509. It differs from the Windsor Castle portrait which is attributed to Quentin Matsys and a late copy of which is in the Royal College of Physicians, London. It was not possible to examine the picture closely, but it is probably a 19th century copy, although a very good one. The portrait is a very pleasing one and I would regard it as a most desirable item.

My general impression of the collection was that it is representative and of a high quality. So far as the British portraits go, I think it is relatively complete in that there is at least one print of almost every person of note. The coverage for some of the most important men is not so wide as that of the College of Physicians or the Wellcome collections. For example, there are, perhaps, six different prints of Harvey and of Jenner out of fifty or sixty that exist. A great many of these known prints are, however, minor variants: the Evans collection usually has a fine copy of the most important portrait.

I should say that the collection would be of the greatest value to a Historical Department, both for illustrative and teaching purposes. I think the price of £2,500 is a little high, and would suggest £2,000 as a more appropriate figure. Although some of the individual prints could not now be obtained for less than £50 or more, a very large number are the kind of thing that could, at one time, be bought for 1/- or 2/6 a piece. On the other hand, I think it would be practically impossible to amass such a collection at the present day and if it were possible, it would probably cost a lot more than £2,500 if it had to be acquired item by item.

Quentin Matsys and a late copy of which is in the Royal College of Physicians, London. It was not possible to examine the picture closely, but it is probably a 17th century copy, although a very good one. The portrait is a very pleasing one and I would regard it as a most desirable item.

My general impression of the collection was that it is representative and of a high quality.
