

ORDER FORM

Please Order through a Bookseller.

FROM O. RICKS,19.....

BOOKSELLER,

To M7, GORTIC ST.,Bookseller.

LONDON, W.C.1.

Please supplycop..... of "PHÆNICIAN ORIGIN
OF BRITONS, SCOTS AND ANGLO-SAXONS" by L. A.
WADDELL. Price 15s. net. Published by WILLIAMS &
NORGATE, 14 Henrietta Street, London, W.C. 2.

Name.....

Address.....

CVS417/53.8

Important Discoveries on the Origin of our Ancestors.

THE PHŒNICIAN ORIGIN OF BRITONS SCOTS & ANGLO-SAXONS

*DISCOVERED BY PHŒNICIAN & SUMERIAN
INSCRIPTIONS IN BRITAIN, BY PRE-
ROMAN-BRITON COINS & A MASS OF NEW HISTORY*

BY

L. A. WADDELL

LL.D., C.B., C.I.E.,

Fellow of the Royal Anthropological Institute, Linnean & Folk-Lore
Societies, Hon. Correspondt. Indian Archæological
Survey, Ex-Professor of Tibetan,
London University.

WITH OVER ONE HUNDRED ILLUSTRATIONS AND MAPS.

Second Impression Now Ready, 15s net. of all Booksellers

FROM O. RICKS,

BOOKSELLER,

7, COPTIC ST.,

LONDON, W.C.1

LONDON

WILLIAMS AND NORGATE

14 HENRIETTA STREET, COVENT GARDEN, W.C.

1925.

For Press Opinions see Over.

The long-lost origins of our ancestors, the Briton, Scots and Anglo-Saxons in the prehistoric and pre-Roman periods back to about 3000 B.C., are now recovered to a great extent in the present work by means of newly discovered historical evidence. Those ancestors are now found to be, not savages, but a highly civilized and literate race, pioneers of civilization and a branch of the famous Phœnicians, who were not Semites, as hitherto supposed, but fair long-headed Aryans in race, speech and script, and identical with the Sumerians. These discoveries are founded on a mass of inscriptions, including hitherto undeciphered Phœnician and Sumerian inscriptions in Britain, and uninterpreted inscriptions and emblems on Early Briton coins of the pre-Roman period. Our ancestral British patron saints, folk-lore and national emblems are found to be Phœnician, and about fifty per cent. of our common English words are disclosed to be Sumerian (Cymrian or Cumbrian), and the Sumerians proved to be the long lost Early Aryans.—From the Preface.

Dramatic confirmation of these discoveries has just come in the large "finds" of Sumerian seals of about 3000 B.C. unearthed in the Indus Valley, a few weeks ago, disclosing the Sumerians as the Early Aryans—a discovery first announced and established in this book.

CONTENTS

| | PAGE |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------|
| PREFACE | V-XV |
| CHAP. | |
| 1. The Phœnicians discovered to be Aryans in Race and the Ancestors of the Britons, Scots and Anglo-Saxons | 1-15 |
| 2. The Undeciphered Phœnician Inscriptions of about 400 B.C. in Britain and Site of Monument | 16-20 |
| 3. The Inscriptions of Newton Stone and Previous Futile Attempts at Decipherment | 21-25 |
| 4. Decipherment and Translation of the Phœnician Inscriptions: Disclosing Monument to be a votive Fire-Cross to the Sun-god Bel by a Phœnician Hittite "Brit-on," and the script and language Aryan-Phœnician or Early Briton | 26-32 |
| 5. Date of Newton Stone Inscriptions about 400 B.C.: Disclosing special features of Aryan-Phœnician Script, also Ogam as sacred Sun-cult script of the Hittites, Early Britons and Scots | 33-37 |
| 6. Personal, Ethnic and Geographic Phœnician Names and Titles in Newton Stone Inscriptions and their Historic Significance: Disclosing also Phœnician source of the "Cassi" title of Ancient Briton kings and their Coins | 38-51 |
| 7. Phœnician Tribal Title of "Barat" or "Brihat" and its Source of names "Brit-on," "Brit-ain" and "Brit-annia": Disclosing Aryan-Phœnician Origin of the tutelary Britannia and of her form and emblems in Art | 52-66 |
| 8. Phœnician Barat or "Brit" author of Newton Stone Inscriptions disclosed as Historical Original of "Part-olon, King of the Scots" and traditional civilizer of Ireland about 400 B.C.: Disclosing Hitto-Phœnician Origin of clan title "Uallana" or "Vellaunus" or "Wallon" of Briton Kings Cassi-Vellaunus or Cad-Wallon, &c.; and of "Uchlani" title of Cassi ruling Britons | 67-80 |
| 9. Local Survival of Part-olon's Name in the District of his Monument: Disclosing Phœnician Origin of names Barthol, Bartle, Bartholomew, and "Brude" title of the Kings of the Picts | 81-90 |
| 10. Part-olon's Invasion of Ireland about 400 B.C. discovers the First Peopling of Ireland and Albion in the Stone Age by Matriarchist Van or Fen "Dwarfs": Disclosing Van or "Fein" Origin of Irish aborigines and of their Serpent-worship, St. Brigid and Matrilinear Customs of Irish and Picts | 91-110 |

CONTENTS (continued)

| CHAP. | PAGE |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| 11. Who were the Picts? Disclosing their Non-Aryan Racial Nature and Affinity with Matriarchist Van, Wan or Fein Dwarfs and as the aborigines of Britain in Stone Age | III-126 |
| 12. Who were the "Celts" properly so-called? Disclosing identity of Early British "Celts" or Kelts and "Culdees" with the "Khaldis" of Van and the Picts | 127-141 |
| 13. Coming of the Britons or Aryan Brito-Phœnicians under King Brutus-the-Trojan to Albion about 1103 B.C. | 142-167 |
| 14. Aryanizing Civilization of Picts and Celts by Brutus and his Brito-Phœnician Goths about 1100 B.C.: Disclosing Phœnician Origin of Celtic, Cymric, Gothic and English Languages, and founding of London and Bronze Age | 168-187 |
| 15. Phœnician Penetration of Britain attested by "Barat" patronym in old Place and Ethnic Names: Disclosing also Sumero-Phœnician sources of "Cumber, Cymer and Somer" ethnic Names | 188-199 |
| 16. "Catti," "Keith, Gad and Cassi" titles in Old Ethnic and Place Names evidencing Phœnician Penetration of Britain and its Isles: Confirming Hitto-Phœnician origin of "Catti" and "Cassi" Coins of pre-Roman Britain | 200-215 |
| 17. Prehistoric Stone Circles in Britain disclosed as Solar Observatories erected by Mor-ite Brito-Phœnicians and their Date: Disclosing method of "Sighting" the Circles | 216-235 |
| 18. Prehistoric "Cup-Marking" on Circles, Rocks, etc., in Britain, and Circles on Ancient Britain Coins and Monuments as Invocations to Sun-god in Sumerian Circle script by Early Hitto-Phœnicians: Disclosing Phœnician Origin of Solar Emblems on prehistoric Briton inscriptions by identical Cup-marks on Hitto-Sumerian seals and Trojan Amulets with explanatory Sumer script; and Hitto-Sumer Origin of god names "Jahveh" or Jove, Indra, "Indri"-Thor of Goths, "St. Andrew," Earth-goddess "Maia" or May, "Three Fates or Sibyls" etc., and of English names and signs of Numerals | 236-261 |
| 19. "Sun-Worship" and Bel-Fire Rites in Early Britain derived from the Phœnicians: Disclosing Phœnician Origin of Solar Emblems on pre-Christian monuments in Britain, on pre-Roman Britain Coins, and of "Deazil" or Sunwise direction and Horse-shoe for Luck, etc., and John-the-Baptist as Aryan Sun-Fire Priest | 262-288 |
| 20. Sun Cross of Hitto-Phœnicians is Origin of pre-Christian Cross on Briton Coins and Monuments and of "Celtic" and "True" Cross in Christianity: Disclosing Catti, "Hitt-ite" or Gothic Origin of "Celtic" or Runic Cross, Fiery Cross, Red Cross of St. George, Swastika and "Spectacles," Crosses on Early Briton Coins, etc., and introduction of True Cross into Christianity by the Goths; and ancient "Brito-Gothic" Hymns to the Sun | 289-314 |
| 21. St. Andrew as Patron Saint with his "Cross" incorporates Hitto-Sumerian Father-God Indara, Indra or Gothic "Indri"-Thor and his hammer introduced into Early Britain by Gothic Phœnicians: Disclosing pre-Christian worship of Andrew in Early Britain and Hittite Origin of Crosses on Union Jack and Scandinavian Ensigs; Unicorn and Cymric Goat as sacred Goat of Indara; Goat as rebus for "Goth"; and St. Andrew as an Aryan Phœnician | 315-337 |
| 22. Corn Spirit "Tas-Mikal" or "Tash-ub" of Hitto-Sumers is "Tascio" of Early Briton Coins and Prehistoric Inscriptions, "Ty" Gothic god of Tues-day, and "Michael-the-Archangel," introduced by Phœnicians: Disclosing his identity with Phœnician Archangel "Tazs," "Taks," "Dashap-Mikal," and "Thiaza," "Mikli" of Goths, "Daxa" of Vedas, and widespread worship in Early Britain; Phœnician Origin of Dionysos and "Michael-mas" Harvest Festival and of those names | 338-362 |
| 23. Aryan-Phœnician Racial Element in the Mixed Race of the British Isles and its Effect on the Progress of British Civilization | 363-378 |
| 24. Historical Effects of the Discoveries | 379-384 |

APPENDICES

| CHAP. | PAGE |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| I. Chronological List of Early Briton Kings, from Brutus about 1103 B.C. to Roman Period, Compiled from Early British Chronicles of Geoffrey of Monmouth and supplemented by records of Dr. Powell, etc., and confirmed by Briton Coins, etc. | 385-393 |
| II. Part-olon's Identity with "Cath-luan," first traditional King of the Picts in Scotland | 394-396 |
| III. "Catti" Place and Ethnic Names evidencing Phœnician Penetration in the Home Counties, Midlands, North of England, Ireland and Scotland | 397-403 |
| IV. Brutus-the-Trojan as the Homeric Hero "Peirithoos" | 404-406 |
| V. Founding of London as "New Troy" (Troë-Noey or Tri-novant) by King Brutus about 1100 B.C. | 407-410 |
| VI. Mor or "Amorite" Cup-marked Inscriptions with Sumerian Script on Tomb of Aryan Sun-Priestess, of about 4000 B.C. from Smyrna, supplying a Key to Cup-marked Script in Britain | 411-412 |
| VII. The Amorite Phœnician Tin Mines of Cassiterides in Cornwall (?) referred to by Sargon I. of Akkad, about 2750 B.C.; and Kaptara or "Caphtor" as Abdara in Spain | 413-415 |
| Abbreviations for Chief References | 417-420 |
| Index | 421-450 |

SOME EARLY PRESS OPINIONS.

- A most interesting book. It certainly appears to scratch out the "pre" from the so-called "prehistoric" period in which the origin of our island-ancestors was deemed "lost."—Daily Mail.
- Offers good reading—subject treated with insight and given attractive form.—Oxford Chronicle.
- Never before has the Phœnician theory of the Britons been presented so authoritatively and supported by such an imposing array of evidence.—Northern Whig.
- One is almost constrained to believe the new theory. It provokes thought, and it ought to stimulate research into regions not sufficiently explored. We may be sure that many theories formulated and accepted in the past, even by careful and learned historians, will have to be abandoned.—Inquirer.
- Is nothing short of a real romance—a book you have to tear yourself away from. Profusely and well illustrated—a fascinating book.—Birmingham Gazette.
- A book of remarkable and unusual interest, written in a very interesting manner. The facts and explanations are very striking and fill over 400 pages, interspersed with drawings of the monuments, coins, stone relics, ancient inscriptions, &c.—Newcastle Chronicle.
- Fascinating deductions of stimulating interest. The claim is all the more interesting because it approaches the subject from a new angle.—Western Morning News.
- Proofs as convincing as they are laboriously worked out.—Daily Graphic.
- The glory of descent from pure British stock has been greatly enhanced by an archæological feat of the first rank.—New York Evening Post.
- Profoundly interesting volume. It cannot be put aside as a collection of hurried conclusions of a careless student. Lavishly illustrated. Pages of deep interest relating to the stone-circles of Stonehenge and Keswick, discovering engraved marks previously overlooked by other observers.—Daily Province, Vancouver.
- A stupendous thing. A book of Truth stranger than Fiction—written in a clear and straightforward style that appeals to the average intelligent reader who has an interest in progress and the manner of that progress of his race.—Globe, St. John, N.B.
- The book is packed with interesting facts from the latest authorities, and the illustrations happily chosen. Indices are all that could be desired.—Professor Sayce.