

(Madam)

COS417/22.2

College of the Book

94, BANBURY ROAD,

OXFORD.

Feb. 27, 1921

Dear Mr. Cushing

I have ~~never~~ ^{never} heard of Osler's Scheme of the College ^{of a} Book, except once as a mere obiter dictum. I had quite forgotten it. The new School of Librarianship ~~Library School~~ connected with the University of London is the nearest approach to it in real life. Dr. E. A. Baker, University College, Gower Street, London, W.C.
1, is the Director.

Possibly Osler knew of this, and never proceeded with the scheme: but it would be interesting to see it in print. You might dance at The Library

ed. by Sir John MacAlister in 1919, I think, or 1920, for a dream about a great Osler Library by MacAlister ~~himself~~ himself.

It is all very interesting, but I cannot contribute anything, I fear, but the feeble notes above-written.

Your book will be a notable one, by all accounts.

I am
Sincerely yours

J. Madan

S. H. Cushing