Dear Sir William Osler

We have not got the post-mortem report of Dr Barry, and should greatly like to have a copy if you are successful in obtaining it.

The Edinburgh graduation we knew was in 1812, and we should like to know the date & the month. She was obviously born in 1794 or 5, as her grave stone in Kensal Green Cemetery says she was 71, when she died in 1865. I am having the grave photographed, and will send you a picture in case you have not seen the spot. The inscription on the stone is as follows:-

Dr James Barry
Inspector General
H.M. Army Hospitals
Died 25th July 1865

She was buried on July 29th.

If there were any further inscription it has been obliterated, but the stone does not bear any appearance of further cutting. It is a sad and deserted grave, the stone almost fallen to the ground and overgrown with weed & grass. We are hoping to have it put in order.

D^r: Barry must have been the first woman doctor. Obviously a woman ahead of her time in nature & brain development.

You ask me if I know whether Col: Rogers is still alive? I regret to say I do not. We heard from a Col: James (Late R.E.) that he had once dined with D^r: Barry, - probably not long before her death. When he returns from the country we are to meet him. If you had the time to set down some of the stories you heard about D^r: Barry from D^r: Campbell, we should be very grateful for them.

I see by last Sunday's "Referee" that "Dagobert" (Geo R. Sims) recalls meeting Barry when a boy.

faithfully yours

Olga Carter
