Dear Dr. Cushing,

Some time ago I wrote you in connection with an article of yours on "Hereditary Ankylosis", and you were kind enough to send me a reprint, and to ask to see the article in which I was referring to yours. Under separate cover I am sending you the reprint "A Critique of Bernard's so-called Laws of the First Bow and of Alternation" in which I made reference to your article. I am extremely interested in heredity as exemplified especially in disease, and in the education of the public in the scientific knowledge of the subject, and this article is intended to correct erroneous ideas.

Will you pardon me if I express my appreciation to you of your "Life of Sir William Osler." I have read it through twice, and many parts of it, more than that. The medical world as well as the literary owes you a debt of appreciation which they cannot pay, either in prizes or in words for that work.

Sincerely yours,

Madge Thurlow Macklin.
