BRITISH MEDICINE IN GREATER BRITAIN

(British Med. Assoc. Montreal 1897)

CVS417/67.10

In Canada the period from 1820 to 1860 saw the establishment of the English universities and medical schools. In Montreal the agencies at work were wholly Scotch. The McGill Medical School was organized by Scotchmen, and from its inception has followed closely Edinburgh methods. The Paris influence, less personal, was exerted chiefly through English and Scotch channels. The Upper Canada schools were organized by men with English affiliations, and the traditions of Guy's, St. Bartholomew's, St. Thomas's, St. George's, and of the London Hospital, rather than those of Edinburgh, have prevailed in Toronto and Kingston.
