In an article published January 1899* Osler says: "Three years ago,

*"Clinical Microscopy at the Johns Hopkins Medical School."
British Medical Journal, 1899, 1, 69-70.

in the second year of the organization of the School the clinical laboratory was built, in part by a bequest of $10,000 from friends interested in medical education." The article is merely a synopsis of the courses, and tells a good deal about the organization of the staff, <sup>and</sup> describes Fitcher's class in detail. W. O. regarded this as a very important part of the School work. (Cf. last paragraph quoted in 1899 chapter, circa May 2nd).
