From "An Autobiography" - Edw. L. Trudeau. p. 210.

Dr. Osler was also keenly interested in my sanitarium experiment and always gave the obscure and struggling little institution the support of his approval. In the first edition of his famous Practice of Medicine, published in 1893, he did not hesitate to refer approvingly to the Adirondack Cottage Sanitarium and the principles of treatment it stood for. The support of his great name no doubt did much to attract attention to its work both here and abroad.

When the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, in which Dr. Osler was so prominent, was formed, I met him regularly at the early committee meetings, and it was no doubt greatly through his influence that I was elected the first president of this splendid national movement against tuberculosis. It was another red-letter day in my life when, at the first meeting of this National Association, in Washington on May 18, 1905, I stood on the platform with Dr. Osler and Dr. Hermann M. Biggs and addressed the great, earnest body of physicians and laymen before me.

Defore me.
