Sunday Oct. 29, 1905.

Dr. C. P. Howard.

Dear Campbell:-)

Docci O's new old ^{desk} church is being used for the first time to send a line to you. Marjorie is with us. We have just come from the service in the Cathedral and Reggie has gone into his own stall arrayed in surplice and hood and winking at Ma. and me as he came down the aisle. I wish you could see the ^{rooms} - they are really charming and it has been great fun getting them in order. We are now looking forward to showing you all the pleasures of Oxford and particularly your God-son - who is rapidly becoming an English boy with an accent. Etc

Marjorie came yesterday and is very robust and jolly. The others wanted to write so I leave room.

Affectionately,

A. Grace.

Dear Campbell:-

These old fools have put me in a surprlice and I had to go to chapel, but I wished I had been in the pulpit instead of the Regius Prof. of Devinity - who is a dry old stick.

Yours,
W.O.
