Who lived here?

40, WIMPOLE STREET,
W.

Oh fleeing a perjured Professor,
Oh scandal of all who profess,
Forsaker of clerk & of dresser,
A teacher without an Address;
Oh Child of the train & the steamer,
Oh wanderer over the main,
Oh if-I-stop-shit-I-shall-scream-er,
Our Healer of Pain

We shall see him no more at the Meeting
Where he gave us his lip & his cheek,
We shall catch but a far-away greeting
To remind us of how he could speak.
Ah heartless & cruel deceiver,
Ah wooer that comes not again,
Poor Oxford! ah why did he leave her
Alone in the rain?

Ah never no more on Commission,
Or Council in cunning debate,
Nor yet as Consulting Physician,
Each syllable pregnant with fate,
Shall we hear through American nose his
Illumining accents explain
The syndrome of erythrocytosis
Ah never again!

T. O.

He's gone to the home of his father,
He's gone where the old folks dwell,
I doubt if he's gone to Heaven,
I fear we shall find him in —

Up & down the blooming Earth
From his birth,
Never in his quiet bed
Till he's dead,
Little Willy's on the hop
Pop.

Prances into Paris town,
Settles down,
Up & off again to Rome
Quite at home
Now he's gone to Delaware
There

Let him STOP.
