

CUS417/111.66

May 29, 1911.

From Oxford.

Dear Libman:

Thanks for your interesting letter. There is nothing like the stirring of the pool; good comes out of it, and this discussion of methods etc. will help materially. I suppose you have been the Socratic ^gsadly stirring up the Athenians to the consciousness of their defects.

They are having a lively time too at the Hopkins, where they are to have whole time men. I hope they will agree to pay them proper salaries, not the beggarly sum I heard suggested.

Sincerely yours,