(To Sir John Rose Bradford)

Apr. 21-23, 1915.

Dear Bradford:

At the meeting at the War Office a few weeks ago of the general committee to settle upon a plan for the Medical & Surgical History of the War, Robinson and I were nominated a sub-committee to deal with the medical side, with power to co-opt any members and arrange sub-committees. We were particularly asked to refer to the Consultants on these points. The Neurological Committee is organized and at work, both in London and France. I enclose the suggested scheme, but the question is getting the men who would undertake the work, and I hope you and Dawson will give us some suggestions. Robinson and I have thought of a number of men, but there is no reason why on each subject there should not be a number of men as a committee to collect material and to prepare the reports. We thought of asking Hale White to take the gunshot wounds of the chest, as he has already been working at the London cases.

I am sending the same letter to Dawson, with whom it might be well for you to have a conversation.

W^m Osler.
