

Oxford.

16, June, 1915.

Dear Packard,

Thanks for the book, with which I am greatly pleased. I had a copy some years ago, but it was commandeered by somebody. You have got a lot of good stuff in it. I am interested to see the pictures of Long. If you ever hear of anybody who has the original copies of Morton, Wells and Jackson, please let me know. I am getting a very good collection of the original pamphlets on the subject.

Hoeber tells me that you are bringing out an edition of the School of Salernum. Whose translation are you using? You will be interested to know that I picked up the manuscript of Harrington's translation, which is the one used in the Oxford edition issued by Cooke.

Sincerely yours,

W^m Osler.