Dear Garrison:

I am disgusted with you for not coming over here, as I was banking on having your advice on many things.

* K/ I am very much tied up with my library scheme, and while I have got the books divided and the catalogue all made, it is a very different matter to furnish the notes,. It will take five years at least, so that it's a race between the catalogue and pallida mors. A few good books come in every week; the first edition of Kant's 'Kritik', 1781, and the early edition (1417, ?) of Nicholas de Guas, ^(1471?) whose 'de Staticis experimentis' is a revelation.

I wish we could get Mackall at steady library work for which his qualifications are extraordinary; he is a perfect sleuthhound in all bibliographical matters!

So glad that the K.P. business is not so bad as you thought.

My greetings to Colonel Straub.

Sincerely yours,

Wm. Osler.

The Annals go well- I am for typo-blunders.
