March 1894

Dear Father;

I got news
this evening to acknowledge your
very pleasant
letter of Feb 14th, as I anticipate a
very busy week.
I am very much
amused at the present crop of letters
but suppose it is

such to require,
as we does not
know where it
occurs. The Foreign Inquiry I am glad to see prosper. I
enclose a little
note received from
Mr. Feltus, as it
contains some
reference to you;
and a note
to Mr. Bayne.

I am very glad to

just that you give
liberty to the superior be. I will desire to do so
myself more than
I do; but it seems
here as if more
will call continually
ourselves about all
I can do.

I would suggest that you advise the
rest, if she does not need the same
you mention for

with, & return it
in the book in
her own name,
as a resource in some cases. In case of any disputes or matters in
concern, it might
enable her to convince some persons
that might prove
for her.

Rumsey is dead, and his

Business is being shut
up by the absence of friends. I shall look after your concernments &c, as stated in my former letter; but
it would be well to find
a formal statement
of assets, attested
if necessary, and
about the books

Assigned to be delivered to me,
Thursday, March 3,
is the opening day
of our new Mineral
school, and
brings to a
close another
piece of colonorization. Henceforth
my work for the rest of the

Joseph should find
a regular routine
not over his shoulder,
I have had very
constant and
invading work,
some of it thankless
enough; but it is
a great consolation
that I find here
so much scope for
being really useful.
We are at present all well

and join in ~~the~~
sending our best wishes to you
and Agnes.

Widow
