My Dearest Darling Edward.

I hope that you arrived safely and that you had a nice journey up - it was hard to let you go harder than it has ever been before. It was dear of your mother to let me come out into the hall, I hated letting you go with only the snippy little good-bye we had in the drawing room -

I was ever so glad that you came down when you did, you made me so happy I have been worrying darling over some of the things which I said to you - and you were so dear to me, when I was just perfectly horrid - but Edward ever since Christmas I have wondered and wondered if I really and truly loved you enough to make you absolutely happy, and sometimes I have felt that my love was so poor when compared with yours, that I would like to run away and never see you again and then I would get mad with myself and feel utterly miserable - but now dearest Edward I think that all

~~all~~ those detestable nightmares are over, and I love you and want you more than anybody else in the world because you are just the dearest best and most splendid person I know.

I am learning how to love you more deeply and more truly than I have before and it makes me feel so peaceful and happy -

I wanted to tell you all this ^{and more} before, when you were here but I could not

I am lonely to a degree and I can't imagine how o can get on without you Dearest please be careful of yourself at Corvatt - and don't forget about that bald spot - and don't get lonely, I will try and write very often to you.

We all thought that you were looking very well ~~the~~ so - don't run any risks and get any more colds -

Please excuse all this, but o am only a child as you know, and have to say things sometimes -

Very much love to you Beauty from your

Lois E.
