My Dearest Husband.

I suppose you are still on the train & spinning meivily t Thetford. having a great old time. It was rather mean of me to say so much before you left. for it must make it so very much harder for you to leave me. but you were so darling to me, I just felt I could not endure to let you leave me, it just makes me thoroughly sick each time you go - It is very hard for both of us to be separated so much, you never can settle down to ~~any~~ ^{the} realization of peace you are always rewing yourself for the next jolt, that you never know at what time ~~it~~ may come. But darling don't worry, perhaps something else will turn up soon. and how nice that would be - I'm so glad that we had that little talk last night, which goes to prove that we can say anything back other without getting cross if we only say it kindly. what you said about me tone has sunk in, & I will try to be better angel face. - "I must ask for what I want," & not make flippant remarks, and "you must not be grumpy & casual." so there we have reached a better understanding though we came there through strife & hurt hearts. Dearest you are you are everything in the world to me and we must be happy & make others happy, it is not worth while wasting any hours on sadness & neuroses. is it? but as G. M. said before we were married that we needed a great deal of forbearance, and it is true, we cannot expect to get to the bottom of each others natures, without some patience, & a good deal of unselfishness, but this is our privilege one to the other - is it not darling? so ~~let~~ here's to happiness  !!!!! -

I addressed the cheques  you wrote. last night, accepted Mr. Morgan's invitation & tried to get Fred Shaughnessy, but he has always been out. your washing is counted & yr room tidied & ready for your return. my precious one. please be careful of yourself. very careful and write to your mother or father without fail if you have time! —

I hope your hand bag will not burst from having too much in it, and I hope dearling that the mico were there safely.

Be a good sweetheart & do plenty of business, I wish I were with you — with all my love & many kisses ever your lonely & devoted little wife L. E.
