My dearest Lois

I hope you are getting along well. I have had a wonderful day. Bright Sun - not a cloud in the sky - the thermometer zero but you could never have guessed it. I had a lovely walk across the bridge over the Assiniboine and along up half a mile to the high plateau on the opposite side.

I heard a sound of wheels apparently coming from miles and miles up the valley and eventually in half an hour saw about $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile away a four horse team slowly drawing a heavy wagon on iron wheels which produced the sound I had previously heard.

It seemed ³ so weird to see hundreds of houses and not one wisp of smoke issuing from them. On enquiry I found that there are no wood or coal stoves or furnaces - nothing but natural gas is burnt. The building construction is light and only part of the houses are equipped with double windows.

The stillness, especially in the residential sections was amazing. I could hear a woman calling to a little dog that had strayed out of the house. I could hear the pigeons cooing in the high stone belfry of the Church but these sounds only served to make the general silence noticeable.

I am now going to try and get as far as
