Dearest Kettle,
I hope the weather has been moderate, & that you have been able to prepare in peace for your exams - I fear Coured is rather a drag - but he seemed to be doing well when I left, I do hope he won't lose his head when he finds himself under the shadow of the University: I hope you will do well, because you deserve it having worked diligently & faithfully for so many years. It would be a gratification to Miss Fairley as well as to yourself - I fear our boat will be rather a ruin, patched with zinc - but we shall see - I forgot - the rug that was the chief ornament of your parlour last year, it is the real one in my room. I wd suggest your getting Con to bring down that large tin trunk to the nursery & prop the rug in (folding it first) & so on with other things of which I will give you a list later. My Concordance in the bookshelves - the Parlour carpet - is rather shabby & the mat is useful to make it tolerable. The weather is beautiful & the place delightfully peaceful & when the unpacking etc is over we will try & absorb as much as possible =

Tuesday

Another perfect day, really warm I have found the ~~lock~~ shop key - hanging on a nail in Father's cupboard. Also had a batch put on the kitchen door to which the key was broken. I believe in fear of murderers.

Our groceries came last night so we have all our belongings - the contents of the boxes are the same - things about the house & we are going to overhaul them & replace & see if anything can be found to renew if not replace them of our coats - I have seen & thought with me - I hope you & Con - try to keep Father in every possible way & don't let us know - the hand written notes on paper vice Lewis we heard a rumour on the train that King's was dead, but all the world later is a blank I wd write to Father but have to write & note for another to uncle George much love to all = the problem was are coming up & now we have got the long H.S. will give them a paper watching tonight we are not quite unprepared yet, but he by tomorrow, there was no much to do all well & love watching letters whether better yesterday with small matter
