

Macaulay

THE LEISURE HOUR.

56, PATERNOSTER ROW, E. C.

London, April 4 1870

My dear Sir

You have several times referred to Darwinism and the Development theory. Now that the book is out I think you might with effect write for the Leisure Hour a brief article containing a few decisive facts inconsistent with the theory. I would not have any general arguments or reflections, but simply a statement of facts and instances not to be explained by that theory.

Huxley Miller did that in the preface to one of his books in reference to the Lamarck doctrines. I shall quote that from Miller, but a page of "scientific doubts" from you would tell well, and be quoted everywhere when a longer review of on any declamatory talk the book, would be unheeded.
I do not enter on any other subject today. I must quit James Macaulay