My dear Sir

I have just been reading an article of yours, in the "Princeton Review," on the "Antiquity of man". My reading on that subject has not been very extensive, & I fear has been somewhat desultory, with the natural result of some little confusion of mind about it, & matters related to it. I venture to intrude on your ability for a little guidance.

What can I read which will put me in possession of the main facts as to man's antiquity, and as to the harmony of that antiquity with a true interpretation of the Bible account of his Creation. His date certainly seems to exceed the old Chronology of 6000 years. Were there Pre Adamic Races then? And how does that agree with the headship of the first Adam, for natural descent, and of the

I regret to trouble you, but I don't care to remain in a state of permanent confusion as to questions about which I ought to be better informed, and your article in the Review suggested my applying to you as to some course of reading in the subject.

I am, very respectfully,
