Dear Sir William

I hoped to be at
Mr. Mulgan's lecture today, when I thought, perhaps,
that I should have an opportunity of answering your kind note in person.

But I find now that I shall not be able to be there.

I was very kind of
you to write to me,
and I beg you to believe that nothing will check my interest in the present movement on behalf of women. But I do not stint. I will join the Greek Class again at present.

In mid-winter the weather would often
prevent attendance,
and I have missed so much of the instruction already.

But next Session if I should have pupils in the Class I may venture again into the 1st year, with your permission,
as I should find it very helpful to follow the Professor in a new book.

I thank you very much for the copy of your address which I read with much interest. It is too soon yet for the work of the College to tell upon Society but in due time it must, of necessity, work a great and beneficial change.

With kind regards

Yours truly
Lucy Simpson
