Dear Sir

When in January 1885 you delivered a lecture in this City for the benefit of this Society you kindly intimated that you might on some future occasion again favour us in a similar manner.

I am directed by the Council, to write and ask if in accordance with this intimation we might have the honor of placing your name on our programme for the approaching season. We have no dates fixed yet, but we think sometime during the Session of Parliament, if it suited you would be most advantageous to us. Hoping that, will I trust, be your favourable reply.

I am

Sir

Yours Respectfully

J. R. Armstrong
