Dear Mr Lighthall,

I beg to thank you for your kind letter received yesterday and
for the suggestion it contains, to which I shall refer in the
inminent lecture on Friday, and which I hope some of our friends may carry
out. I should

we say to think
that any considerable
number of our graduates in law or of the members of the profession generally sym-patize with the
narrow policy of the Council of the Bar, which being
a fluctuating body,

is naturally very much
led by its Secretary,
who seems to be
the prime mover.

From my experience
of the Bar Council, I fear we can do little with it as at present constituted, but I still have some hope of relief from the Legislature.

Yours truly
Madame

is certainly very much
but I do not
who seems
the former
from very experience
of the Don course, for
we can do with
it as at present
stated, but I think
have done well
chief from the department. I hope to be
