Dear Sir

I have lately read your work "Fossil Men" & on page 319 was pleased to find your remarks re present state of religious teachings & necessity to return to original plans. I take the liberty of addressing you to state that the new work of Prof Heron of Iowa College, takes up the very points you suggest on page 319 & if you have not read it "Between Caesar & Jesus" you will I think enjoy it. I am a cutter after the right, but under present economic conditions (which the Church seems to approve of) I find it exceedingly difficult to put the first principles of Christianity into practice in business life. Read Mr Sheldon's remarks as to the difficulties of Christian business men, are correct - it is almost an impossibility to do the right (as Christ said) today. I myself have asked very many business men & they all agree that it is not to impossible to do the right & make money. Now Prof Heron seems to me to strike the nail on the head. If you read his work & would favor me with your views in return - later on I shall be extremely obliged to you.

Yours respectfully
W. H. Marcon
