Sir William Dawson,

23 July 86. | I am told that cards can now go to England with an extra stamp, in accordance with the rules of the Postal Union + I try this as an experiment.
Would you please acknowledge it. It is very useful in the case of printed cards such as I use. I send a Juzette with Editorial on Selwyn. It is rather lame as a defense + leaves him "condemned for want of praise" to a large extent. It makes me a little indignant to see Selwyn's work criticized as it is, when it was really extra work. I am finding too that works of Superintendents are not much appreciated, + throwing pearls before swine is apt to have the usual result. But of course scientific work is not done for appreciation. We are all well.
