

Raukawa
Sept/87

Noville
Friday -

My dear Father,
just a line to
advice you of safe arrival here, after a fair and pleasant
although somewhat
slow voyage -

Young Barclay, a son of the Rev<sup>d</sup> of St Paul's, a very bright pretty lad, a little Miss Buchanan, and a daughter of Bishop Lewis, were amongst

2/ Those of whose people one knows something. For the rest half a dozen tourists business men returning home, and two or three more children on their way to school - Altogether a very unenterprising
and uninteresting company.
Weather has been exceptionally fine, and passage a quick one for this boat.

I shall likely remain over Sunday with Crows, and go on to London on Monday,
provided they are not

3/ already full up.

I sometimes feel very weary of this
wandering existence,
and shall certainly keep a sharp look out for anything in the way of an opening with any chance of success.

I fear by this time
you are over head
and ears in college
work, and to trust that matters may move rather more smoothly for you

then during preceding sessions -

with best love to Mother and to all

Your affectionate son
Franklin -

Remember me very kindly to Mr McDonald
if you see him -
