Dear Margaret

I ought to have answered your letter long ere this, as I promised to do so. I have been unable to accomplish it, before this, on account of other business, of which you know the nature. Accept of my thanks for your kindness in having complied with my request to favour me with an answer. You have now commenced, may I cherish the fond hope that will continue a correspondence. I printed yours with much pleasure, and trust I shall long enjoy the benefit of <sup>receiving</sup> your letters - I met Miss Buxton <sup>in the morning</sup> in the Nicolson Street today, and nearly laughed in her face when I remembered your description of her project with Mr John.

... as an apology for the
... you are today quite better &
... the worse of your yesterday
... I certainly should like to have
... early yesterday when I
... forgot the text from which Mr
... preached, and I read it over on
... home I almost invariably
... it is in 2 Timothy 4 Chap. 780.
... a good sermon, but not so much
... as I expected. I received from the
... (this is sometimes deceitful)
... that the other minister
... the better preacher --
... to have an opportunity of
... before I leave --
... have just written Harriet, and she
... said a vessel sails on Saturday
... and another on Sunday.
... the pleasure of your
... to the exhibition today
... and you able - I have
... to write Maria and the day
