Dearest Margaret

I have this moment arrived here, and have just read your letter of father, and have only a few minutes to write before the mail closes. I have finished my work at the habitués R., have ex. arrived two beds of coal, and been as far as St Peter's. The weather has been good, except Tuesday which was stormy, and I am quite well and most happy to hear that you are so; though wondering myself of your own Confession, I must admonish you To take more exercise. When I return I will be as brown and robust as a pugilist, and must not find you looking pale and careworn. During the remainder of this week and next, I expect to be employed in finishing up the remnants of my survey, the easiest parts being left to the last; I do not however expect to reach home till Saturday two weeks, as I must visit my copper vein again, and will thus be just too late for Wednesday post.

Congratulate James Cowan for me on his acquisition of more teeth but advise him to use his penicils mercifully. We have cause dear Margaret to thank god for his continued kindness. I will try to write more fully if I have time by next mail.

Your affectionate
William
