

her confiding the same to the conductor.

On reaching Toronto we found both Dr Wilson & Jamie awaiting us, we drove round to the steam-boat office but all they could tell us was that the boat was all ready at the wharf, loaded & waiting to start but her having departed on the ice at the point St Marie which they seemed not to be in communication with - George telegraphed to Collingwood but received no reply. We lunched here & then went with Dr Wilson & saw the University also ascending the tower from which we had a magnificent view of the whole city, though perhaps magnificent, is scarcely the word to use when the whole country is absolutely flat.

Jamie was going out to spend a quiet evening at a

Mrs Elliotts & as George declined to go, & I did not like to keep Fannie at home I went with her, there were not many people the two Miss Elliotts are very handsome & also good & nice Mrs Waters was there & greeted me rapturously, which quite pleased me as I almost feared we wd not recognize she had sister was there too, but not the one I had met before.

The Wilsons are thinking of going to Murray Bay this year to the boarding house - & Mrs W. says it wd quite decide them to go if we took a house there.

I hear that Mrs Redpath is coming up here with the girls to go to the falls, if it is so wd it not be a good opportunity for me to go too, Eliza wd be a very pleasant companion. If you see her I wish you wd speak to her about it.

for I fancy she will only be passing through here.

Dr Wilson is going this summer to Westganche river with Mr Fleming, which would be an additional advantage if William went.

I told George of the gingerbread & chocolate, & he took the news very meekly. seemed rather pleased about the latter he left this morning for Bollingwood, as having received no telegram he considered it the safer plan to be on the spot I was glad he had a good night's rest here, he went to bed quite early last night & had comfortable breakfast this morning before leaving. he said he would telegraph from Bollingwood to you.

The weather here is sunny but chilly scarcely as warm as at home.

With love to all
your ever affectionate
Anna.
