My dear Lady Dawson

I've been wanting to write to you or Eva for many a day; but oh I've had a dreadful time, belly has been so very ill for two months. She is now in a very good Sanitarium in Yorkville - under the care of a very clever Doctor, a specialist in nervous illnesses - It was only last Monday, that a room was vacant for her, & already we feel very hopeful about her speedy recovery - though she will likely be two or three months there - I was almost worn out with nursing her & was obliged to get a nurse at last, to take care of her -

It's not fair to tell you about my worries; but I only mention them as an excuse for not writing to Anna or any one - I really hadn't the heart for it & was far too tired, besides - how Papa & I are having a cozy time to ourselves, somewhat hampered by papers & white-washers in the kitchen regions -

As to the wedding, which is leaving the important point last, I will be very happy to come to you, as you say on the 3rd & stay till the 9th, we will all look on the bright side & enjoy the wedding & if you look forward it must only be as far as the delightful visit from the bride & bridegroom at Metis - which is such a very charming plan for you all -

Papa sends you his kindest thanks for your invitation to him - Their Convocation is held just about that time; but if it is within the verge of possibility he will come down for the day -

I will reserve my news, until I see you & what a lot I have to say, only I don't think you will have any interest, save for one theme -

With much love to Eva, Anna & Yourself & kindest greetings to my friend Sir William

Believe me

Yours very affectionately
