My dear Mother,

I have a note from Rankin today, in reply to some letter of mine, in which he writes rather cheerfully, but alludes to his unpromising condition. He says he has been taking some post-graduate course with Leslie & working a little at skin diseases at Blackfriars, where one of the women being away he has been doing part of his work & getting some practical experience.

Most of his letters is taken up with mining matters & several newspaper news.

Mining affairs do not appear to be going very satisfactorily & I cannot help thinking that he continues to look forward to possibly settling in the medical line in Montreal, eventually.

I see that he has moved to new quarters, where he says he has a comfortable room which he means to try to keep so long as he remains in London.

Did you say anything of him about winey when you write, or do you know whether he can if he needs it obtain any winey?

Yours
George
