Lady Dawson,

Dear Madam,

It is with feelings of reticence that we obtrude ourselves upon you in the hour of your bereavement, yet we feel anxious to express, as far as words can, our deep sympathy with you in your great loss.

As an Association we feel the loss of your beloved husband very keenly. He ever showed the most lively interest in the Association's welfare, and his kindly counsel and sympathy will be greatly missed. But although his death will leave a blank it will be impossible to fill, yet his life has been a benediction to the men of McGill and his influence for good will be long felt in the University.

While God, in his infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove your beloved husband, yet we feel that his works will follow him and that he being dead yet speaketh.

We join in prayer that the great All-Father may uphold you and yours in this time of affliction.

Signed on behalf of the Association
