

Logan's books and dinner sets

My own dear wife,

I have only a few moments before dinner time, but shall occupy them with writing a line to my love.

I have tried to do a little work to-day, but owing to neuralgia have accomplished very little.

In the morning I went to town with Moyse who was anxious to see Sir W. Logan's books which are to be sold by auction on Thursday next. The three dinner sets of which you have heard me speak are also to be sold. Myre came home to lunch with me and we had quite a pleasant chat.

I heard from Irving since you left and got a cheque from him for $7.00 as payment for the two last copper assays which I made for him. He does not growl in the least about the $7.00, but says that my assays settled their controversy satisfactorily. As for Mr Brown I am really getting annoyed at his not paying me

For my report on the Buckingham property.
Such matters ought to be settled at once, and if I do not hear from him soon I shall send him a gentle reminder of his duty.

When I was at the Survey to-day I saw Michael who has not yet left for Ottawa. The poor old fellow is feeling very badly as his wife is ill and not likely to recover. The doctors seem to think that the disease is cancer in the stomach. I am very sorry for the old man. Richardson is up from Point Lewis and came to see me to-day.

I might I suppose now leave for St A - but have made up my mind to wait until next week.

Your mother expects Judge & Mrs Day in to-morrow morning. How long they are to stay I do not know.

You must be very busy darling, getting the house in order. Do not feel that it is necessary to hurry about it - there is plenty of time. But I must be off to dinner.

I long to see you all so much but must wait.

Your loving husband
B.
