Dear Mrs Harrington,

As one who is comparatively a stranger in Michigan, I have some hesitation in writing to you at the present time. Nevertheless it is partly for that very reason that I feel impelled to write, because the extraordinary kindness shown to me by Puffen Harrington at a time when I was ill in lonely lodgings made all the greater impression on me, owing to the very fact of my being practically unknown to him.

I can never and shall never forget his goodness to me on that occasion. Though he must himself have been weary at the end of a lengthy and busy term; when he learned that I was going away under medical advice, he took infinite trouble in suggesting suitable places, giving me introductions, and in many other ways. I have long felt that if ever a man put into daily practice the blessed precepts of Christ, it was Dr. Harnington - though he was so entirely unconscious of the fact himself.
It must be some slight consolation to you at the present time to know how generally

This is realized: for I am of course only one of hundreds who can bear the same testimony, and who will continue to cherish his memory with gratitude and reverential affection.

Most sincerely yours
Runele Struwayh ten

Mr Haydon
