Dear one - Can you bear an epistle on this colour of paper - I went into a shop and of this said, "take me" so I took it - Again I have a little note to thank you for - I so feel that Joan has troubled you by "sorting" the library - I intended to warn her solemnly on the subject but did not.
Your essays are, seemingly, behaving well, perhaps due to the absence of distractions now that we are away -

Dear dear Love it is very nice of you to miss us all so much & I don't think you will be much more pleased to see me, than I shall be to have my dear husband near me again, though I doubt not I will have quite a store of grumbles readily for him - I do seem to myself to be more helpless, than ever before more oppressed, but it may only be because I forget - I have abandoned the twin theory, it is one mighty creature Mithras full armed, or Samson unshorn - something of a prodigy certainly - but poor little Eric has seemed unwell today, first complaining of pain in his stomach & feverish cold feet & hands, he quite gave up tonight. I have given him a coriander bath his feet, & as he said yes when asked a leading question about his throat, a Limeed practice is on his neck. Grandma feeling that her special dread, I did not see any cause to suspect the throat myself - I thought of sun-stroke but the last 3 days have been so cool & both Tuesday & Tuesday evening shd be detained. They are coming soon I believe. I gave of easily just your hand on my marking ink in a tin case, it is somewhere about my little drawers, or the book case. It might come with the soap but 5 minutes does not find it - never mind I can put a red cross on my new thing

Lovely given
Wife.
