Dear Sir,

Yours of yesterday
reached me this morning and I now send you the results asked for. The proportions of Copper in the three samples are as follows:

No 1	6.34 per cent
" 2	6.08 " "
" 3	6.07 " "

I am very sorry that you have been kept waiting so long and can readily understand that the delay

might cause you inconvenience.

I had almost finished the assay when I was a second time ~~again~~ taken suddenly ill and ^{for} some days confined to bed, so that the delay was really unavoidable.

If in future I find that I cannot send your results as promptly as you would like I shall endeavour to give you the name of some one else who would undertake them.

At present I cannot think of anyone who would be tempted by the $2.00, which to tell the truth does not pay.
