

Sunday

July 13, 68

Dear George,

Having had very little time during the week I sit down this afternoon to write to you on a few points to which I think it worthy you should attend in your present separation journey. I hope you will bear in mind the responsibility which rests upon you, and endeavor in all things to set an example of pure and good conduct and conversation. You should endeavour to make you intelligent and knowledge accessible in pursuing the happiness and welfare of others and showed carefully about everything that might injure any, especially of the Melchior in whose company you may be. I trust also you will remember the Bullath & keep a body and will not forget to pay to part for his protection and redemption and that he would thank you

What you can give to any inquiries, and can leave me a two to the reading room of the hotel

The weather is exceptionally fine here
I feel quite dry & have Warman and Rankin in it; but trust I shall be back in time to let them go on some little excursion. I shall hope to see you myself on my return from New York about the middle of August, New York

the way of salvation, Spec-ally do not forget his kind presents of you in the late accident.
If need I can assure you to the greatest happiness of your welfare and me if we could see you really devoted to the service of God. Do not speak in any light or contemptuous way of sacred things. Nothing that can be imagined will do more harm to your own soul than this.
Please attend to your health. Take all the benefit papilla of the sea

member that this is the real advantage which we try to secure for you. He does take the thing that you
you rather than that
be very moderate with your wine because we expect the sea air in some degree to take its place.

We expect to leave for Munich and shall procure you apparatus by the way It will be free of freight. I shall enclose in the parcel a few copies of the calendar
