

M. Gill College.

Monday night
1893

I shall expect to send this George mail but - failed. W. B. has again been hurt. The post has improved ~~the~~ ^{the} ~~accuses~~ ^{accuses} ~~except~~ ^{except} a letter further up ~~the~~ ^{the} ~~by~~ ^{by} but in a faint judging out ~~the~~ ^{the} ~~by~~ ^{by} M.

George

Thank you so much for your kind letter & advice wh I will endeavor to give heed to. Last week ^{was} full of excitement especially to paper, as he seemed quite anxious to appear at several of the welcomes given to the new Lawrence - added to these his meeting at Richie, which entered two consecutive nights in the evening, are put together has proved too much for his strength & has brought on a severe swelling of the weak part followed by redness & heat I sent for Dr. Blackader. who kindly by bestowed great care upon it, & last night brought Raddick with him. They bathed & carefully disinfected the part & applied a thick layer braking aintment, smothered it in lint & her eyes & raised the leg with pillows to the level of his head. He has passed a delightfully quiet, & easy night & is now lying on the bedroon sofa reading It is erysipelas that has attacked his foot & the medical men say that in a few days he will be ~~well~~ all right again. But I please to to add that Blackader tells me the swelling there has less or more troubled him since his illness last Autumn has developed into some chronic affection of the vein that is incurable & that it depends wholly upon how nearly he can live by hygienic rules to what amount this will give him trouble in the future. So we have both palsy returned upon the practice of age & I confess that I long to be settled in the small new house where we are more likely to begin a retired regular life. I get neither of us have made a step in the direction of preparing for our removal. The weather has been so lovely that I have had a daily drive perhaps when the weather breaks it will give us time to work a little. I have just received a nice pleasant letter from Alice who seems well Miss Lumm was going to stay with her for two nights so I shall hear particulars when she arrives. Write all loving greetings from Mother,