Dear George,

Dr Brown has

Anna and me yesterday,
and gave his final
verdict in favour of the Abbe's, and Anna has written

to two places there
to make inquiries. There is no doubt the advantage of Neary's
and of D. H. Pease

I spoke slightly of Hale's paper on Rocheley, had then only glanced
 at it, and found
 that it contained
 little respecting the fall of Rocheley. I have since read it more
 carefully; and see
 that there are some good suggestions in it, the whole matter however needs to be looked into, and worked up,
 and would afford

a free field for a competent archaeologist,

I have handed
my synopsis of Airbeathes & Peribellus for publication. In taking stock of the no 1, I find that it may contain
ones referable to about 22 separate Peribellus
I two out of them
probably new species,
the others belong to
about seven species already known.

Yours from
Kendal to W. & F.

Eric when he comes
out. At the same time Bruce thinks Eric will have to go
west in the autumn
and winter. It may therefore be well to collect any information you can as to me
N. W., in case that should be selected
for the autumn.
The whole matter

is going to give us trouble, as Anna's decision of being the rest of her
flock off to Metis before she goes with Eve, and one of her servants she reckoned on & so has failed her, so that it
is not unlikely that we or one of us may have to go with the party to Metis earlier
than we had intended,
and everything here will
be broken up in haste.

I shall however hope to be able to tell you more about all this soon.

My own feeling is that Mamma and I should remain here for the summer and keep up headquarters for the Metes & Beckwiths, and be able to receive Rankine when he turns up. The difficulties of this are immense great,
and at the moment
we hardly see our
way to anything.
When you will see
