Sept 26, 1884

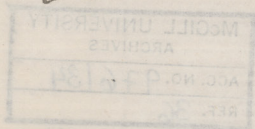

My dear Rankine,

I rec'd this morn'g & acknowledge and thank you for your kind letters from Singapore and Shanghai which have been received.
Our life here moves on so uninterrupted that we have little to tell; and since the outbreak of the pest, everything has been quite flat. In writing to Messrs.
I feel that I may be writing in vain, as the quarantine regulations consequent on the cholera may prevent in care of not calling at Mansfield you should be in London earlier than expected.

George accompanied the Duke of Devon people on their trip into the Rockies and has gone out again for a little autumnal campaign before returning for the winter. We have a late letter of he was well.

Our entrance bearings are very good, and we are starting classes for women under the endowment given us by in friend I wish it might which I mentioned in my last,

Ever yours affectionately, And with kind love of all here including Alice Chow, who is with us at present.
