DIFFERENTIAL EQUATIONS IN ACCOUNTANCY

Accountants use differential equations to model various financial scenarios, such as the growth of investments over time. The rate of change of an investment is often proportional to the current amount, leading to exponential growth models. For example, if an investment grows at a constant rate, the differential equation $\frac{dA}{dt} = rA$ describes the relationship, where A is the amount and r is the interest rate. Solving this equation yields $A(t) = A_0 e^{rt}$, showing exponential growth.

Another application is in modeling the depreciation of assets. The value of an asset decreases over time, and the rate of depreciation is often proportional to the remaining value. This is modeled by the differential equation $\frac{dV}{dt} = -rV$, where V is the value and r is the depreciation rate. The solution is $V(t) = V_0 e^{-rt}$, illustrating exponential decay. Additionally, differential equations are used in portfolio optimization and risk management, where they help in understanding the dynamics of asset prices and the impact of various financial decisions over time.
