Nature Expert in Compliment to City's Zoo

SANTA BARBARA, April 24.—Featherhill Ranch Zoo is a big asset to Santa Barbara, according to Dr. Harold C. Bryant, nature expert in charge of educational work for the California State Fish and Game Commission.

Dr. Bryant visited the zoo in company with Santa Barbara friends while here to speak before the County Fish and Game Protective Association, and declared that he did not know of any institution anywhere in California that equals it, except, possibly, one at San Diego, which is a municipally owned and conducted institution.

"The fact that the Featherhill zoo is so complete and comprehensive and is open to the public free at all times, is something Santa Barbara should congratulate itself upon," said Dr. Bryant, "for it is really valuable to the student and the young person in the study of bird and animal life, and it is of sufficient interest to anyone as to be a genuine asset to the community."

Featherhill ranch is owned by Christian R. Holmes, nephew of Max C. Fleischmann, yeast magnate, and the zoo was started originally to amuse his two children.

Dear Sir:

I have your letter of the 21st. You are most welcome, and will be very glad to show you my birds, but I fear that my collection will not be much on an attraction as it is very limited. At the present time I am breeding Cockateels, Budgerigars, Zebra Finches and Bengalese.

Very truly yours
