Dear Mr. Sherborn

I am afraid you will think me ungrateful because I have not yet written to thank you for your kind gift of the Dorset paper. You could not think that I failed to 'extract' it, in obedience to your command, from Mr.
Carter. However, I thank you your kindness every time I look at the papers — which is not seldom. I have been delighted with the Isle of Wight paper, but what is going to become of the world and the dear old scientific conventions if you are going to be allowed to call nonsense by its own name.

A spade may be called a spade, & a hammer a hammer.
But — nonsense, nonsense! Perish the thought! However, its somewhat refreshing, I must admit.

'The Bishop' is still in a fine geological frenzy, and I am his companion on most of his expeditions. He turned out a cyphosoma test, I believe, at Boswell on Saturday, and I brought home Pentacrinus, I believe again — I've sent a joint to the doctor for identification.

'The Bishop's' sermons are getting quite geological, and he illustrated 'The meek shall inherit the earth' by a chalk pit and its treasures, brandishing the while an invisible geological hammer!
I nearly gave a war
