FREDERIC H. KENNARD
Newton Centre, Mass.

Nov.4,1931.

H. Mousley
4073 Tupper St
Montreal, Can.

Dear Mr. Mousley:

I duly received that book, and was particularly glad to get it, and, wondering who had been responsible for sending it to me, was on the point of thanking the Librarian at McGill University.

Many thanks, not only for the book, but for your thoughtfulness in sending it. I will write Dr. Wood.

We missed you at Detroit and Windsor where I maintained headquarters for the convenience of thirsty Appletonians. Detroit is an unattractive hole I know, but we, nevertheless, and rather unexpectedly, had a pretty good time while there. Wish you had found your way down. Most of the congenial ones of the old crowd were present.

Thanking you again for that "Introduction to the Literature of Vertebrate Zoology" and wishing you a Merry Christmas and a lot of Happy New Years, I am

Sincerely yours,

Fred. H. Kennard

Casey A. Wood Collection

FREDERIC H. KENNARD
Newton Centre, Mass.

Sept. 2, 1924

Dr. Casey A. Wood
7 W. Madison St.,
Chicago, Ill.

My dear Dr. Wood:

After nearly two years' effort on the part of some of us, the Harvard Faculty has finally consented to give two courses, to be known as Zoology 6 A, Biology of Higher Vertebrates - Birds, the first half year; and Zoology 6 B, Biology of Higher Vertebtates - Mammals, the second half year, with Dr Glover M. Allen, I am very glad to say, appointed lecturer for five years.

Ornithology has been taught for a number of years in a number of other universities which haven't anything like the advantages we have so far as collections go; our bird collection ranking at or near the head, and our mammal collection second, I think, in this country.

As was to be expected there were no funds available for this especial purpose, and Dr. Thomas Barbour was good enough to underwrite the course financially for five years. We still lack $4,000 which it seems to be up to me to raise.

I know you have all sorts of calls on your generosity, but knowing also your interest in birds and the great out-doors, I am writing to call this matter to your attention. If you are sufficiently interested and feel like helping the good work along, a check for whatever you may wish to subscribe, made out to C. F. Adams, treasurer, and sent to me, will certainly be appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

Fred. H. Kennard