Dear Doctor:

Ward tells me that you are at the above address and I am using it for this note to thank you for the article on "Lessons in Aviculture" and so on. I am glad to get on your track again and am delighted to get this reprint. It is delightfully gotten up and admirably done. I see that you are making these years of retirement a prolonged delightful game. May you be able to prolong it for many years to come! But I hope that we may see you in this country at least once in a while.

Things are going fairly well in the medical school. We have passed the acute crisis of reorganization and, of course, there have been some changes in the faculty in consequence. Some thought it best to withdraw and in some cases I thought that the connection might well be different from what it had been. You heard doubtless of Eycleshymer's sad ending.

With all good wishes as ever, I am

Sincerely yours,

David Kinley
