Address by the President and Chairman

Since the last Annual Meeting, I am sorry to say, we have suffered the loss of three of our Directors.

Mr. George T. Donohue, a Vice-President and dean of the Board—he had been a member for more than 22 years—resigned because of poor health. Messrs. Henri Ferron and Gérard White, who also had been with us for several years, submitted their resignations in order to devote more time to their professional activities.

We wish once again to extend our deepest gratitude to these distinguished colleagues who have always given us their unstinted co-operation in every way over the years.

In order to fill these vacancies, the Board called upon Messrs. Michel Baribeau, Jacques Lagassé and Charles É. Marquis, three prominent businessmen whom I am sure you all know well. On your behalf, then, I would like to welcome them most cordially and assure them here and now of the high esteem and respect we hold towards them.

Finally, I would like to pay a very special tribute to one of our most devoted colleagues, Mr. René Leclerc. Preparing for his approaching retirement, he has agreed to relinquish his duties as Chief General Manager while continuing as Vice-President. Speaking for all of you, I would like to say how pleased we are that he remains as one of our Directors. I would also like to extend to his successor, Mr. Germain Perreault, our sincere wishes for the utmost success.

There is a strong temptation to look upon the year now ending as one of those destined to go down in history. Busy as we all too frequently are with our everyday problems, we often are unwilling or unable to see beyond the immediate horizon to the vaster vistas which lie ahead. This time, however, there is no doubting the fact that an era has ended.

It was an era in which the United States, dominating the world with its industrial and economic power, nevertheless put its own selfish interests somewhat aside to come to the aid of a shattered world. Without that help, recovery from the grievous wounds inflicted by World War II would never have been so rapid. Quite obviously, the measures announced last August 15th by President Nixon would not have caused such great surprise if people had been willing to read past and present signs while making their predictions for the future.

Just a year ago, at our last general meeting, I expressed the hope that the United States would not yield to protectionist temptations as circumstances might have dictated. Since then, the situation has worsened. Although the consequences, and the unyielding attitude most of all, are painful to accept, the U.S. action is understandable. The Americans quite simply had no other choice.

WORLD PERSPECTIVE

Up until last August, the world's economic ground rules had not been changed since 1944. That was the year the Bretton Woods agreement confirmed the undisputed economic superiority of the United States and the praiseworthy willingness of the Americans to help the entire world bind up its wounds. They were quick to give priority to the cares and problems of others, even to the detriment of their own interests. As long as their power remained intact, they never felt the consequences.

But all ideas of power are relative. Europe and Japan, the main victims of the last great war, have now climbed back to the point where their potential for greatness is clear to see. The forthcoming entry of Great Britain into the Common Market can only strengthen this long-term trend. These countries have reached the stage of abundance and it is worth noting that it is their technology and competitive abilities which have carried them there. It was only natural, then, that their faith in the U.S. dollar should crumble, since it was no longer able to play the magical role that it had for so long.

As a matter of fact, the present crisis has been 20 years in the making. The U.S. had its first annual balance of payments deficit back in 1950. With a few rare exceptions the deficit has grown every year. By the first quarter of 1971 it had reached an annual rate of close to $20 billion and the accumulated deficit had soared over $50 billion. The reasons for this are well known. They have been discussed at length in all the world's newspapers. It's easy to understand why there has been a drastic drop in the U.S. gold reserves, which have now fallen below $10 billion. That is even less than West Germany's present holdings.

Technically, it is evident that the American dollar should have been devalued long ago. Revaluation of several currencies and the floating of some others, including ours, have not noticeably improved the U.S. payments imbalance. It is also clear that the political implications of any U.S. devaluation warrant close consideration. Even if a sick economy is not too good for politics, the role of the world's leading power should not be abandoned heedlessly.

Forecasts for 1971 were even wider of the mark than those of previous years. So, since wage and price increases over the past few years have totally destroyed its competitive capacity both at home and abroad, the United States was compelled to take drastic steps to meet the emergency. Such a fate inevitably catches up with any nation which lets wage demands run ahead of its productivity growth curve. The question must be asked, however, whether the present measures are not greatly exaggerated. The U.S. undoubtedly is moving toward the same objective which others have been pleading for it to follow. But we scarcely believe it was necessary to try to reach the goal so rapidly. Moreover, although revaluation penalizes all exports for the consuming countries, the protectionist measures adopted affect manufactured goods most of all.

The United States undoubtedly took this stiff action to arm itself with bargaining power to force Europe, Japan and Canada to realign their currencies with the U.S. dollar. Our neighbours were unwilling to have this symbol of power and stability humiliated by reducing its parity in terms of gold.

Nevertheless, this attitude involves definite risks. Through the measures which it has taken, the United States wants to bring its export-import payment flows into balance by restricting international trade. Worst affected will be exactly those finished goods whose production creates the most jobs.

So the spectre of unemployment will hover over the Americans' major suppliers, unless they can increase their domestic markets to take up the slack of those lost exports to the United States. Alternatively, they will have to find new markets. This can be achieved only through greater productivity to maintain stable prices, along with increased purchasing power in the hands of prospective customers.

Finally, it is important to point out the real threat which creation of the Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC) will have for all exporting countries and world trade as a whole. Intended to promote American exports by freeing them from taxes, this measure is a body blow to the competitive capacities of non-American products.

These concerns about the United States economic measures should not make us forget the entry of mainland China into the United Nations. Regardless of anyone's opinions on the subject, it seems that logic has finally triumphed. It is no longer possible today, under any pretext whatever, to pretend to speak for the entire world while ignoring a country whose people number one-quarter of all mankind. More than ever, there is a need for direct dialogue. China has to be accepted as a full partner and granted equal rights with those we enjoy.

Elsewhere, the forthcoming entry of Great Britain into the Common Market was inevitable under the nature of things, no matter how it will affect certain interests.

Events have followed one another so rapidly that we perhaps have forgotten the essential lesson we should draw from them: we should never forget that nothing is unchanging. A country's dynamism and strength are the exact qualities which determine its ability to face such situations calmly and optimistically.

THE UNITED STATES PICTURE

The American predicament is emphasized by the measures taken by President Nixon. Their primary aim is to brake inflation by adopting temporary measures to freeze prices and wages and thus stimulate the economy. At the same time, a definite willingness to reduce unemployment is being shown. The stock market, usually a very reliable psychological barometer, provides a good indication of how public opinion has reacted. Following a clearly optimistic phase from August 15th to the beginning of October, a pessimistic trend set in for the next three months. Since the beginning of November, in turn, this has been replaced by a more moderate trend of optimism. This is preferable to the excessive short-term reactions.

Along with these emotional reactions, it's important to examine the facts. For more than a year now, prices have been rising at a rate of about 4.5 percent. This seems to have been cut in half recently. Still, we should be cautious in drawing any conclusions from such a short-term indicator. However, even though business has been in the doldrums, unemployment has dropped for two consecutive months. This is a bit encouraging to all those waiting so impatiently for an upswing in the economy.

The Nixon programme of last August 15th provided two stimulants to household spending, an essential factor for growth. These positive actions were the raising of income tax exemption levels to a slight degree and removal of the federal tax on automobile sales. The latter has produced immediate results. Industrial equipment purchases and exports have also been given a strong impetus.

Government spending, which will be considerably increased, is still the main ingredient for recovery. The budget deficit for 1972 is predicted at $25 billion. Expenditures on this scale should result in significantly improving the situation during the coming months, according to the type of correctives applied. Other conditions are also more favourable than previously. There appears to be renewed public confidence. Savings have increased recently. Interest rates on loans have dropped appreciably, making needed capital more readily available to businessmen.

If the decisions taken by the United States President surprised many by their sheer brutality, the strength of the forthcoming rebound will perhaps be equally astonishing. The government moved to create a huge source of supplementary purchasing power, which will certainly be used, although most of this new consumer money will probably flow toward the service industries under today's spending patterns.

CANADA

Despite the hard shocks which shook the United States, Canada's economic performance has been particularly satisfying. The actual growth rate is keeping pace with our long-term potential and the rate of inflation has been noticeably more moderate than last year's. Employment has been increasing at a very favourable rate in absolute terms. Unfortunately, it is still not enough to absorb the great number of newcomers pressing onto the labour market. This is especially true in Quebec, creating the regrettable situation of which we are all aware. Finding a solution to this important social problem must be given priority.

The strength of our currency on the international money markets should also be noted. The healthy condition of the Canadian dollar is undoubtedly an indirect tribute to Canada's good balance of payments situation. It is quite clear, however, that this virtual revaluation does not make it any easier for our exporters. This problem also is felt especially keenly in Quebec.

Under the present circumstances, the upcoming application of tax reform measures is of special concern. Many important amendments have been made to the measures during the past two years, but no significant changes have been made in that part of the legislation relating to taxation of capital gains. The avowed aim of this measure is to ensure a more equitable distribution of the country's wealth. As laudable as this objective may be, we should ask ourselves whether it must take precedence over our economic development.

No one can doubt that above all else Canada must determinedly develop its secondary industries if it wishes to ensure its future prosperity. It has been unable to do so up to now and has had to make frequent appeals for foreign capital to develop its resources, despite the unhappy consequences that course has brought in its wake. If the profit incentive is removed by taxing capital gains, should we not worry about a significant reduction in new investments, Canadian and foreign alike? The results would be regrettable, because redistribution won't be of much help to anybody if there is less wealth to share.

WHAT THE FUTURE HOLDS

No good purpose has ever been served by brooding nostalgically about the past, revelling in regrets and bitterness. The American decisions undeniably have created more problems for us. Forthcoming entry of Great Britain into the Common Market will also make it more difficult to export our goods. In addition, the virtual revaluation of our currency has not made things any easier for our industrialists. Lastly, no one can deny the urgent need to create far more employment than we have ever been able to do in the past.

But it is inaccurate to believe or say that 1971 resembles 1929 in any way. Conditions are fundamentally different. The corrective measures we can apply are unbelievably more effective than those available in the past. We know far more about the economic phenomena than we did in those dark depression days. Above all, we know with certainty now that any analysis of the present situation must take into account the lessons of the past. Forecasts of future trends in any society must be based on an accurate diagnosis of present and past behaviour. If we doubt our future, we have no faith in ourselves.

I refuse to be pessimistic, because present conditions favour an upswing in economic activities. The necessary development capital is available. Interest rates are attractive. A vast reserve of qualified labour is begging to be put to use. Individual purchasing power is high. Several incentive measures applied by governments already are beginning to bear fruit. If need be, these efforts can be increased. Finally, our currency is stable and our foreign credit excellent.

What more do we need to have confidence? What do we want to be sure of success? Do we wish the United States to coddle us as a weak and defenceless neighbour in need of their tender loving care? This would be strictly contrary to the truth. Do we want Great Britain to spoon-feed us with all the benefits and privileges they used to bestow graciously on their colonies? This most certainly is not what we want.

If we still have among us builders and pioneers with the spirit of our ancestors; if we have the good sense to tailor our demands to our competitive cloth; if we take stock of all those things which unite us rather than those which shatter and separate us; then we can look with optimism to the future which awaits us. We only have to follow the course which a calm analysis of the situation will show us is the right one.

Caught between two great economic entities, the United States and the Common Market, we are in a sense isolated. So, we must determine to become that third force which the western world needs to restore its equilibrium. Since it is hopeless to expect our low-technology industries to compete with those in developing countries where wages are low, we must inevitably turn to other activities.

Research is the key to technological development, which generates jobs and prosperity. We must then direct all our best efforts in those areas where our country's greatest prospects lie, such as energy and transportation. Since our domestic market is too small to absorb our expanded production, we must resolutely turn to outside markets. We will have to use the most modern and proven marketing techniques available to us. Only through confidence in one another and by joining all our energies and abilities can we create the industrial and social climate essential for constantly increasing production. We must approach this task honestly, willingly and with all the good faith we can muster.

Finally, since our secondary industries sector is still virtually in its infancy, we should be prepared to invest our own money to bring it to lusty manhood rather than cringing in fear that others will do it instead and reap the benefits.

Although the new conditions imposed upon us by the rest of the world have served to isolate us somewhat, it is precisely this isolation which will force us to draw upon our strengths, put our energies to profitable use. There is nothing more stimulating than freedom of action for those willing to choose their objectives clearly, and logically chart the road they wish to follow. I believe that we are capable of this. I am confident of our future.

Germain Perreault

Remarks by the Chief General Manager

Since this is the first time I have had the honour of addressing you, I would like first of all to tell you how moved I am to have this privilege. I am truly honoured to have been chosen to carry on such a long and distinguished tradition: that of reporting the achievements of your Bank. All the more so since this Bank for many years has been marked by its dynamism, growth and unflagging determination to use all its energies in serving a clientele constantly growing at a rate which should make us all proud.

A recital of figures makes for tedious listening. Dry as they are, however, they provide the only way to judge our progress objectively. I would like, then, to review briefly the highlights of our financial situation.

As of October 31, the Bank's assets were $2,280,867,000, an increase of 19.5% over the previous year. Loans, which make up the largest part of our assets, increased by 13.2% to a total of $1,215,457,000.

Deposits leaped ahead spectacularly. They now exceed $2 billion, or 19.4% more than the 1970 figure. Accumulated appropriations for losses now stand at $34,000,000, which is 27.9% higher than at the end of the previous year. More than $12,000,000 of this amount is tax-paid. The Rest account was increased by a transfer of $3,000,000 from undivided profits, along with a $7,897,000 premium on capital stock subscriptions, resulting in a current total of $64,897,000.

Total revenue for the year was $152,059,000, representing an increase of 4.5%. Expenses were up by 6.2% to $131,687,000. As a result, balance of revenue at $20,372,000 was down 5.5% compared with the previous year. After transferring $6,000,000 to accumulated appropriations for losses and a provision of $7,277,000 for income taxes, balance of profits for the year was $7,095,000, an increase of 6.9%. An additional $1,659,000 was provided for income taxes on the amount transferred to accumulated appropriations for losses. Total provisions for income taxes in 1971, therefore, totalled $8,936,000.

Earnings per share for the year just ended were $1.08, based on a weighted average of 6,564,000 shares outstanding, compared with $1.11 a share on 6,000,000 shares in 1970. Balance of profits this year is therefore higher than last year.

Dividends voted for the year total $4,671,000, an increase of 8.1% over the previous year. Although there are now more shares in circulation, the dividend rate remains unchanged at 72 cents. It should also be remembered that, under the terms of the new stock issue, shareholders had the benefit of a subscription preference which was equivalent to a dividend of 50 cents per share, on the average.

Our policy of encouraging savings has borne fruit again this year. Total deposits increased by almost 20% and we paid out a record amount of interest exceeding $76,000,000. Deposits are the raw materials of every banking operation and a most welcome formal indicator of good health. In this respect, it makes me especially happy to point out to you that our foreign deposits have grown from $107,000,000 to $201,000,000 in the past year, for an increase of more than 87%. This mirrors the ever more heartening results of the Bank's efforts to build up its image abroad.

It must be acknowledged that our Bank was little known outside Canada not too long ago, paradoxically perhaps in view of the BCN's size. But in the recent past, especially in the year just ended, we have corrected this image significantly by taking part in several transactions of international scope. The results have not been long in coming. Now that we are better known, we are gathering in deposits from almost everywhere and, as a result, we know that we are serving the best interests of our Bank and of our country.

As a matter of fact, foreign deposits are especially beneficial to our clientele because they increase our ability to extend credit, the source of development and progress. We also believe that, in the world as it exists today, no one can play any worthwhile role within selfishly restricted horizons. All must look outward. This philosophy fully justifies our increased participation in international operations. By so doing, we make it possible for our customers not only to profit from our foreign contacts and connections but also to enjoy increased possibilities for expansion. Following this same line of thought, we have successfully joined several international syndicates along with other banks. We are also turning our attention toward Africa, a continent in full growth and with a great future.

As a result of these initial experiments, we now know what possibilities lie ahead for us on the international scene. We plan to take full advantage of them.

Despite the significant slowdown which the economy has undergone lately, it is well worth noting that our loans have increased substantially. Special attention should be drawn to mortgage loans which now total more than $113,000,000, an increase of 44.1% over 1970. This is a good indication of the greater incentives we wish to provide for the private home building sector.

In another area, we are making every effort to give customers the benefits of a complete range of constantly more useful new services. One significant fact backs up this claim. As you know, our savings accounts are life-insured, at no cost to the depositor, up to a possible total amount of $5,000. Since this "Double-Your-Savings" plan was launched in 1967, we have honoured more than 4,600 claims and have paid out more than $3,393,000 up to the end of this fiscal year.

Since 1971 to a certain extent represented a slight levelling off in our steady climb to greater success, I would like to make a quick review of our past.

In 1961, our assets were slightly over $823,000,000 and our objective was to reach the $1 billion mark. This was achieved in 1965. The following year, 1966, our assets had climbed to $1,120,000,000. Just five years later, that figure has been more than doubled and we are now well over the $2 billion mark. As you can see, progress has been rapid and especially noteworthy during this past half-decade.

Our total revenue, which was $39,746,000 in 1961, has almost quadrupled since then. It grew to $62,608,000 by 1966 and now exceeds $152,000,000.

Profits have also followed a steadily rising curve. Our balance of revenue went from $8,041,000 in 1961 to $9,563,000 in 1966 and then moved up rapidly to $20,372,000 this year. Balance of profits after income taxes was $3,242,000 in 1961, $4,273,000 in 1966, and this year it reached $7,095,000.

The Rest account has also grown steadily, from $34,000,000 in 1961 to $47,000,000 in 1966 and $64,897,000 this year.

BCN had 295 branches in 1961 and 340 in 1966. Today, there are 363 and there is no need to remind you of the remarkable transformation in our Head Office facilities in 1968, when we moved into the new BCN building.

I have purposely reserved some significant figures for the end of this backward glance. BCN had 4,172 employees in 1961 and 5,011 in 1966. Today, we are 5,442. In ten years, therefore, our staff has grown by 1,270, or by slightly more than 30%. Yet during that same period our profits have increased by 120%. In addition, we have provided our customers with many new services.

These figures speak for themselves in an era when, as we well know, it is imperative to place the emphasis upon efficiency and ever increasing productivity. In my opinion, this calls for a very special tribute to our personnel. Only their proven loyalty, competence and sense of duty have allowed us to achieve those results which I have brought to your attention. On behalf of us all, I thank them most sincerely. It is because of them that we are where we are. Together, in the future, we shall climb to even greater heights.

I am convinced that tomorrow will find us well prepared to meet the challenge. I have already told you of our plans on the international scene. In Canada, the listing of our shares on the Toronto Stock Exchange last February is but one indicator of our plans for future expansion.

In Quebec, we are better than ever equipped to ride ahead on the upswing which is soon to begin. Our record total of deposits places us in a better position to fulfill the needs of industry and of those wishing to expand their businesses, as well as the demands for mortgages and personal loans.

We are also constantly improving our equipment. Our data processing department is now in full swing and 50 terminals link our branches directly with the central computer, simplifying and speeding our customers' transactions. During the coming year, 65 other terminals will be installed. In addition, new computer programmes are now available. One of these, in particular, allows us to offer businessmen complete payroll handling services.

In another area, we are busily at work regrouping our branches by districts. This streamlined new structure speeds up decision making so that we can attend to customer needs and desires in the shortest possible time.

Pursuing our policy of expansion, we opened nine new branches this year, including one at Windsor, Ontario. Three of those in Quebec are located in new shopping centres. In all of them, special care has been taken to provide more and better customer conveniences, as well as added employee comfort. In this connection, it is worth adding that 15 offices have been entirely rebuilt and that six others have been extensively renovated. Needless to say, this work will be actively continued in 1972.

A few moments ago, I mentioned the major role our personnel have played in helping us to reach our objectives. Reflecting our desire to maintain staff proficiency at levels needed to handle all tasks that must be faced, 350 employees attended courses at our BCN training centre this past year. In 1972, the courses will be extended to 550 employees. In addition, 1,150 enrolled for courses given by the Institute of Canadian Bankers.

Thirty new branch managers were appointed during the year. You also have probably noticed that Bank management has welcomed to the team two new General Managers, Messrs. Jacques Douville and Jean Boulanger, and two Assistant General Managers, Messrs. Claude Racicot and Pierre Castonguay. All have come up through the ranks, providing a vivid example of the future which BCN can offer its employees. I am very happy to number them among my closest associates.

Our advertising, persuasive link between the Bank and its customers, won two Coq d'Or awards last year, a tribute to its quality over these past 12 months.

Under these circumstances, I have no hesitation in saying that the BCN is entering a new era of growth to serve a constantly growing clientele. Far from being a mere wish, this is a new challenge which we firmly intend to meet and master together.
