SHAKESPEARE on
Appearance

In a famous passage of Hamlet, Shakespeare argues that it always pays to buy the best clothes you can afford.

He knew how much men judge by appearance—the world will often take you at less than your own valuation—but very seldom at more.

A big part of success is to look the part—

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Executive Committee of the Red and White Revue of 1930 wish to express its indebtedness to all the firms which, by giving advertisements, have made this programme possible; also to Wm. Notman & Son for photographs; to the management of Montreal Theatres for stage properties, lights, etc.; to C. W. Lindsay & Co., Ltd., for the use of a piano; to the T. Eaton Co. for furniture and stage properties; to the many Montreal firms which have this week offered their windows for displays; to the Singer Sewing Machine Co. for the use of an electric sewing machine; to W. C. MacDonald Inc., for the use of a billboard; to Punde and Boehm for wigs; to Mme Valade for helping with the costumes.

Programme Continued - -

WE HAVE with us tonight the remembrance that Gurd's Ginger Ale makes a welcome drink to wind up an enjoyable evening and that you can get it—ANYWHERE. Like the Red & White Revue it leaves a good taste in your mouth. Try it after the show.
