

~~MS. 3. 4.~~

NB. 6.

HARPHIUS [DE HERP or ERP] (HENRICUS)
-1478.

7572. In Latin and English, on paper: written about 1915 at Oxford: 13 x 8 in., i + 8 + 15 leaves.

A modern transcript by Miss E. G. Parker (from a copy made by Andrew Boorde in the London Charterhouse about 1520 and now MS. Douce 262 in the Bodleian Library) of the 'Directorium quoddam breuissimum mentis in Deum ad consequendam vite perfectionem, fratris Henrici Herpe ordinis minorum de obseruantia', or, as it is termed in the colophon, 'Exercitium amoris vnitiui', a religious mystical treatise in 7 chapters; followed in a second hand by a translation of the same into English. The suggestion made by the Rev. H. O. Coxe and Mr. F. Madan that this 'Directorium breuissimum' is a translation made from the Dutch by Petrus a Blomenenna (rectius Blomevenna) is due to its confusion with another of Herp's works, the much longer 'Directorium aureum contemplationum'.

In the Douce MS. 'The dyvyne Cloude of Unknowyng', a devotional treatise in English, occupies the first 132 folios. Then follow three little treatises copied by Andrew Boorde; (1) on fol. 132^v, a treatise on repentance, beginning 'When a soll begynyth to fele grace'; (2) on fol. 134, the 'Directorium' (here copied); (3) on fol. 139^v, 'The Pystell of privat counsell' beginning 'Gostly frende in gode'. On fol. 1 of the MS. is 'Liber domus Salutacionis Matris Dei prope Londinium Ordinis Carthusie'—the Charterhouse; the cataloguer adds 'about A.D. 1500' and says the Boorde MSS. were added about 1520, which would be while he was still in the monastery.

Brother Henry Herp was a Flemish mystic whose works were very popular. The 1474 'Speculum aureum' [printed by Peter Schöffer at Mainz] is a noble volume of sermons. In the 'Theologica mistica D. Hen. Harphii', 1601, p. 567, is a chapter which begins like this little treatise, but it is not the same throughout.

Boorde's restless spirit was "nott able to byd the rugorosyte off your relygyon", as he wrote to the Prior—see his letter in the Life by Furnivall in no. 2084, p. 47; but these three tractates testify to a longing for a mystical union which the burden of the flesh did not permit him to enjoy. Any one wishing an insight into what Sir Thomas Browne calls Christian annihilation should read chapter vi of the 'Directorium', leaf 7 of the translation in this MS. Perhaps in the Fleet prison the broken spirit of the weary and worn traveller found comfort and consolation in the words of Brother Herp—I like to think so!

[W. O.]

7572

FROM
THE LIBRARY
OF
SIR WILLIAM OSLER, BART.
OXFORD

j (alt)

W. Osler

Oxford.

66, GREAT RUSSELL ST., London, W.C. 1 ^{Removed from} 232, High Holborn 41

198 HERP (Henricus) Speculum Fratris Henrici Herp: de preceptis divine legio. Thick sm. 4to, woodcut pasted on title, large and small gotbic letter, double columns, 52 lines, initials in red and gold rubricated throughout, in a stamped binding of Netherland's calf, over oak boards; the centre panel of upper cover, measuring 4 by 2½ in., represents the "Image of Pity," the figure of our Lord standing in an altar-tomb with His hands crossed before Him, His head surrounded by a cruciferous nimbus. On His right are the reed and sponge and the spear leaning against the ladder, Judas's purse, the pinchers and two pots of spice. A vessel for the vinegar occupies a position on the left, where are also the pillar with a rod of twigs and a triple scourge placed saltirewise in front of it. Above the left arm of the cross is the cock. A border bearing this legend reads: "O vos omnes qui transitis per viam attendite et videte si est dolor similis sicut dolor meus." This panel is surrounded by a frame, in the corners of which are double-headed eagles, and in other sections roses and fleurs-de-lys. The panel on under cover, measuring 4 by 2½ in., is divided into two sections separated by a lion, a wivern, a gryphen, and a pelican in its piety, the other compartments are stamped with the same animals, the surrounding border is the same as that on upper cover. £12

Impressum in Argentina per Joannem Knobloch, 1520

 Upper panel, Weale 388, lower panel, Weale 400. The design of the panel on under cover is similar to one used by Anthony van Gavere of Bruges.

I had this copied thinking at first it was by Bonde himself. It is an interesting statement of myphum.

W.O.

S.C. 21836 In Eng. & Latin on parchment: written in the 15th & 16th cent., by W. Tregood(?) and A. Boorde: $7\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ iii. # 162 lines

"The dyvnye cloudy unknowynge" a devotional treatise. Part by Walter Hilton.

"In about 1520 Andrew Boorde added (1) on fol. 132^v a treatise in repentance, beg. 'When a soull begynyth to fele grace' (2) on fol.
134 Directorium quoddam brevissimum mentis in Deum - (which is here copied) It may be the translation from the Dutch made by Petrus a Blomenra: (3) on fol.
139^v 'The Pystell of privat counsell' also written according to the edition, by A. Boorde: beg. 'Gostly prude in gode'

On f. 1 of the MS. is Liber domus salutacionis Matris Dei prope dundunum Ordinis Cisterciensis - the Charterhouse (about a. d. 1500)

(f. 134)

Directorium quoddam breuissimum mentis in deum, ad consequendam vite perfectionem, fratris Henrici Herpe ordinis minorum de obseruantia, viri vtiq[ue] viteque (1601 ed.) deuotionis precipue atque excellentis litterature.

Theologia
 Mystica D. Hen.
 Harpini. 1601. page 567.

in word of Harde in this printed copy, which differs somewhat.

Quicumque post rudes vite actus decursus post adeptam, ali-qualem sensualitatis mortificationem vtiq[ue] presentis et omnium non solum mundanorum sed etiam inutilium occupationum pervenire voluerit ad internam contemplationem et vite perfectionem considerare debet duas esse vias in idipsum deducentes Una via est scolastica et communis fere omnibus: set labor-iosissima et longa nimis: quarum est ascensus ab exerci-tatione virtutum moralium ad charitatem; quorum inquam est contemplatio quasi penitus in parte intellectiva: ut sic invisibilia dei per ea que sunt intellectu respiciant et ex creaturis creatorem silogisent: alia vero via mystica est et fere omnibus ignota set facilior, breuior et vberior in qua diuinus dionysius constituit aliarum virtutum perfectionem utens in operatione sua via affectiva: que consurgit potius per aspirationes quam per meditationes; Et huius vie licet multe sint sentite: tamen gracia breuitatis ad habendum quoddam breuissimum directorium in hanc viam proficiendi sic faciet.

Capitulum. ij.

(f. 134. b.)

In principio debet quis habitare se ad hoc exercitium ex-equendum in hunc modum; quod fere per medium annum vel plus vel minus secundum quod se proficere conspexerit; In principio suarum exercitationum recolliget fasciculum diuini amoris recolligendo omnia vel specialia amoris insignia: que christus (secundum

secundum
 diuinitatem vel humanitatem nobis ostendit ad inflammandum cordis igniculum et praecipue recolendum passionem dominicam et hoc quantum ad tria: Secundum beatum bernardum scilicet quantum ad opus ad habendum compassionem quod est incipientium: Et modum ad excitandum in se veram imitationem quod est perficientium: quia in modo perficiendi inuenimus speculum omnium virtutum scilicet abississalem ^[sic ms.] humilitatem, incomprehensibilem mansuetudinem, patientiam autem ultra humanam estimationem et sic de singulis virtutibus que potissime claruerunt in illius passione; Tertio inspiciendo scilicet illam eminentissimam charitatem: que coegit illum subire tam horribile genus mortis unde considerabit ipsam diuinitatem tanquam interno amore omnia illa pro amore generis humani perficientem: et hoc est perfectorum. Et ideo ad perfectionem volens in hijs exercitacionibus venire principaliter diriget intencionem et consideracionem ad causam, ut sic inflammetur: secundo ad modum ut ad sequelam incitetur: tertio ad opus ut etiam compaciatur:

[*f. 135]

Capitulum: iij.

[sic ms.]

Verumtamen in omnibus exercijs* diligenter intendere debet: quod nullum exercitium* proprietate frequentet set solicius aduertere debet in sua introversione quod in suis exercijs* tractum spiritus sancti iugiter obseruet qui multipharie multisque modis nunc per unum nunc per aliud spiritum humanum magis inflammat quo valeant omnes vires eius recolligi et in dilectum trahi: et ideo quaqua uersu liberalissima diuina bonitas illum traxerit ad sequendum in exercijs suis vicibus adeptabit: Quia omne exercitium eius erit ad inflammandum cordis igniculum quod in principio sine premeditationibus et consideracionibus diuini amoris in primo reflexu cordis ad deum incendi non potest; Sicut videmus in edificijs arcuatis: quod (primo primo supponuntur ligna ut sic muri firmitas superedificetur: Cum vero fuerit superedificata tunc subtrahuntur ligna sup-posita: Sic etiam postquam hoc amoris exercitium sic fuerit per tempus aliquod exercitatum tunc tandem sine premissa medi-tatione quocumque voluerit in ipso primo reflexu mentis (*f. 135. b) et affectus in deum immediate inflammabitur * Et hec inflammatio est unicuique instrumentum et radix istius vie iusticie: Unde consurgit virgula et stipes arboris de qua crescit arbor totius perfectionis que dicitur aspiratio ad amorem virtutum qua scilicet fidelis anima aspirat flammigeris desiderijs per amorem viri infinito amori qui est deus et ab eo penitus absorbi Et hec aspiratio virtuti amoris exci-tanda est cum maxima violentia spiritus ita quod exinde plerumque extasim et maximam penam sentiat eo quod non dum est habitatum sine habitatum ad tale exercitium sustinendum: Unde vix credibile esset quid in corpore nec dum aptificata tunc contingit presertim in hijs qui vigorose hoc exercitium ^[sic MS.] virtuti amoris prosecuntur de quibus tamen gracia breuitatis supersedeo.

capitulum iiii: de modo exercitandi amorem.

Preterea ad perueniendum ad consuetudinem exercitandi amorem hunc virtutum debet fidelis anima in quouis loco et tempore. ambulando. sedendo. iacendo. etiam commodando assuescere semper ad dilectum aspirationes mentales et quandoque etiam vocales emittere: formando ad orationes debitas quas augustinus ioculatorias vocat utpote dicendo: O amor meus O sola spes mea: O totum refugium meum et omne desiderium meum: Ihesu amantissime utinam * dignus inuenias ut anima mea tuo dulcissimo fruatur amplexu: immo ut tu in ea et ipsa in te vicario amplexu recreetur ut sic eius tepiditas ab immenso tui amoris incendio valentur in-(calescat calescat; O anima anime: O irta anime mee te totum desiderium: me tibi totum offero totum toti, unum uni, unicum unico; O utinam impleatur in me illud oraculum tuum ad patrem quo dicebas: Pater rogo te ut sint unum sicut et nos unum sumus ego in eis et tu in me ut sint consummati in unum Et fenita similia: que crebro reuoluit anima deuota: Et dicuntur proprie aspiraciones. Et exercitium istud est principale in omni via perficiendi.

Capitulum .v.

Quando se sentit homo cordialiter inflammari et sursum trahi tunc in parte intellectua imagines vniuersae consite sunt relinquendi quantumque nobiles et utiles ad inflammandum esse videantur, siue sint diuine largitatis, bonitatis, potentie, sapientie et cetera: quas mens ipsa viuaciter pertransire contendet amoris igne penitus inflammata donec peruenerit ad intimum silentium. cuiusmodi ubi non est humana operatio: quia ibi solus deus operatur: ita quod se spiritus humanus habet passive et deus active: Et licet tunc diuerse exercitaciones ~~conserfite~~ ^[e] consite ^x irruerint: omnes tamen pro tunc rescindere debet et abicere simpliciter duntaxat et inde, in intima sua progrediens et ultra in deum contendens: Et quoniam extunc spiritus sanctus docet de omnibus his que aguntur inter spiritum diuinum et humanum omitto prosequi; Hoc igitur exercitium ^[ti] amoris unitiui a multis occultatum est incium omnis perfectionis quia per illum amorem omnis temptatio consumitur viciorum; Hinc dicit petrus Rauennus: Tenere milicie et delicate conflictus est: solo amore de omnibus vicis reportare victoriam; Est etiam amor ille scaturigo omnium virtutum quantum ad eminentissimam perfectionem quia cogit hominem aspirare ad omnimodam diuinam similitudinem in plenissimam mortificationem omnium viciorum et perfectissima ad eorum omnium virtutum.

(perfect-

Capitulum vj. de iij^{or} ramis vel exercitijs concomitantibus.

Amor virtutis est arbor felicissima et perfectissima in perfectione viatoris: que quatuor ramis adornari debet id est quatuor exercitijs concomitantibus que sunt; Dare. Exigere. Conformare. Unire. Primo debet dare omnia. quodcumque spiritus diuinus per inspirationem internam spiritualiter exigere potest et precipue perfectam abnegationem et elongationem sensualium vel malarum oblectationum quibus miscatur et maculatur inordinatus affectus in multiloquio, vaniloquio, ociositate, vana societate, in cibo et potu et cetera, ac perfectam mortificationem naturalium passionum scilicet inepta leticia, inordinata tristitia, in inordinato timore, in vana spe, in mundano honore et sic de alijs; Semper gerens cor super omnem multiplicatam et occupationem tamquam stabilitum in deum et elongatum ab omni vicissitudine humanarum rerum; Nulla timens aduersa; nulla affectuans prospera; Ad hoc laborauerunt gentiles philosophi quanto magis christiani; et precipue religiosi et sic secure veniet ad secundum exercitium^[a] quod est exigere; Unde debet a deo non solum omne quod habet; set etiam omne quod est; verum tamen in omni quod eget a deo nunquam debet exⁱspere aliquid ad fruendum set ad utendum; Hoc est nunquam debet quiescere in donis de quantumcumque magnis set tantum debet eas vti ad maiorem perfectionem consequendam; Et ideo quicquid deus dederit; siue seipso semper minus reputabit semper famelicus remanebit; Nam multi quiescentes in adeptis donis vel gratijs a desiderio magis proficiendi refrigerant; Et ideo securius est ea tantum petere que deducunt ad veram perfectionem scilicet diuinam gratiam et super omnia nudam et intentissimam charitatem

(et et ut diuina liberalitas illuminet intellectum eius ad veris-(f. 137. v.) sine * cognoscendum seipsum id est suam vilitatem in nichilitatem et etiam deum id est precipue ac potissimum diuinum beneplacitum ad illud exequendum; Porro tertium exercitium conformare scilicet quod se conetur conformare christi humilitati in omnibus virtutibus que precipue relucent in eius despectissima. dolorosissima et acerbissima passione et precipue imitari cum totis viribus in affectu profundissime humilitatis et vilitatis; Non putet enim quod per exercitia propria ad illas virtutes perungere possit; Sed eas in principio consurrectionis huius virtutis amoris ad deo ardentibus affectibus expostulet; Quartum est vivere tam plenissime. voluntatem suam voluntati diuini sine retractione cordis. quod scilicet cum quadam complacentia mentaliter medullitus etiam omnibus aduersis que contingere possunt in tempore vel eternitate se deo liberaliter offerat ut sic tandem diuinum beneplacitum fiat sibi summum desiderium: siue sint aduersa exteriora ut infirmitates. persecutiones. derisiones. oblationes. scandala. et similia; Siue interiora ut subtractiones gratie diuine influencie. siue obnubilaciones mentis et sensuum. vel in-frigidaciones affectuum. vel etiam temptationes et similia: Et (f. 138) in hoc tempore magis * sollicitus erit inueniri dilecto fidelis: certe sciens quod dilectus hec facit: vel permittit ad probandum illius fidelitatem ad et ad ditandum bonis suis et gratijs iam fidelem inuentum: Et ideo tunc maxime cauere debet ne defluat nec querat solacium in vanis et in-vtilibus occupationibus. vel ne ocio torpiat set semper in quantum potest in bonis exercitijs et operibus se teneat: quia licet pro tunc bona opera vel exercitia non sunt sapida tamen magis deo accepta et nobis meritoria si facimus quod in nobis est; Similiter quantum ad eterna se liberaliter conferat diuino beneplacito: etiam si illum ponere vellet (eternaliter eternaliter in inferno quantum ad penalitatem, set non quantum ad caritatis et voluntatis separacionem: Et licet hoc difficile videatur quia natura hoc omnino refugit: Per multiplicata tamen desideria et per diuinam gratiam affectum super effluentem ad hoc peruenire potest: quod tam prompte et liberaliter se offeret ad sustinendum totius inferni penalitatem quam ad suscipiendum eternam gloriam, et gaudium beatorum; Hic est notandum quando sese quis in aliqua virtute adipiscenda, videlicet, in abiectione sui per humilitatem: vel resignacione sui ad paciendum eternam penalitatem propter diuinum amorem et similia cum se sentit ad illam virtutem ita affectatum: quod sine ulla retractione^[+] cordis id est nature sensualitatis se liberaliter offerat in illam voluntas rationis etiam tempore substracte gratie: tunc sciat se virtutem illam diuino munere plenarie assecutum; Si vero voluntas rationis voluntarie se offerat ita tamen quod voluntas naturalis adhuc contradicat: signum est virtutis adhuc minus per flammigeras affectiones excitata; Et ista quatuor pro temporis vicissitudine excitari debent et hoc in hunc modum ut practica detur simplicibus.

De practica predictorum quatuor exercitiorum capitulum vij^{mo}

Cum primo enim senserit inflammatum cordis igniculum; primo debet superincendere omnem defectibilitatem id est omne vicium, non tamen currendo per singula vicia: set uno fasciculo sumptens omnem suam imperfectionem, proiciet in illum infinitissimum ignem diuini amoris ut omnia consumantur; Deinde offerat liberaliter omnia quecumque deus ab eo exigere poterit in tempore vel eternitate; Et si in principio sensualitatis contradicat nichilominus^h tamen et quod voluntate rationis offerat; Deinde exigat a deo quod est, (habet

(* f. 139)
 habet; Hoc est primo exigit et petat ab eo purissimam illuminationem mentis ad cognoscendum veraciter semetipsum id est propriam vilitatem et nichilitatem Et etiam ad cognoscendum plenissime diuinum beneplacitum * ad fideliter illud exequendum; Ad quod se offerat tam per paratum in omnibus sine retractione cordis sicut umbra mouetur ad motum interpositi; Nam diuinitas lumen est; Humanitas autem interpositum est; Et voluntas nostra erit umbra; Ita quod sicut umbra mouetur ad motum interpositi; sic volun-tas nostra mouebitur ad conformitatem vite christi quod est conformare; Et in hac umbra fructus dulcissimus ipsius spiritus degustatur; Sub umbra (inquit) illius quem desiderabam sedi et fructus eius dulcis gutturi meo; Et ideo sumopere aspiciere debet: ad conformitatem vite ^{christi} in virtutibus sintillantibus desiderijs expostulando ut eisdem virtutibus ani-mam suam adornare deus dignetur; Quia virtutes multocius per flammigeras orationes quam per exercitia conquisi-untur; Ex hijs breuiter premissis ac velut in quoddam fasciculum pariter collectis ulterius conscendere debet per amorem vinctum in ipsam caritatem increatam quæ deus est; Ut sicut ibidem anima liquefacta feliciter omnium eorum que petijt a domino quasi sigillatam quadam impressionem reuere mereatur; Et qui se in talibus frequentauerit et hijs perseueranter inheserit impossibile esset quoniam ad vite perfectionem perueniret; Ad laudem domini nostri ihesu christi: cui est honor et gloria in secula seculorum, Amen.

(f. 139. b)

Explicit exercitium amoris virtuti a fratre Henrico Herp. compositum ad vite perfectionem tendentibus per utilimum Directorium. Conscriptumque per Dpnum andream Boorde: per quo exoro in caritatis vinculo; ut preces pro eo ad ihesum fudere curetis.

A short guide ~~to~~ to lead the mind towards God, for the attaining perfection of life. from the observance of By Brother Henry Herpe, of the order of the minors Observance, a man distinguished for devotion and of excellent learning -

If any one whoever has left the rough turmoil of active life, has attained to some mortification of the senses, has renounced the affairs of this life, has withdrawn not only from worldly but from all useless occupations, and now desires to engage in inward contemplation, and to strive toward the perfect life, such a one should consider that there are two ~~ways~~ ^{paths} which will lead him toward his goal.

The first is the path of the schools, common to nearly all, but of great labour and over-labour.
 Those who follow it rise from the moral virtues to charity; their contemplation is lodged so to speak wholly in the understanding; thus they behold the invisible things of God through intelligible things, and reason out the Creator from his creatures.

There is, however, another ~~way~~ path, the mystic, unknown to well-nigh

A short guide to lead the world towards God, for the attainment of perfection of life by Brother Henry Kemp, of the order of the Servants of the Lord, a man distinguished for his piety and of excellent learning of his own Brother Kemp left the rough trail of active life, and returned to some satisfaction of the senses, his manner, the affairs of this life, his religiousness, and his worldly but for the world's satisfaction, and thus became a martyr in every contemplation and to divine counsel the perfect life, such a one should consider that there are two paths, the first is the path of the world, common to nearly all, but of great labour and sorrow that the former is more for the world's order to charity, their contemplation is to be to speak, which is the understanding of things that should be in the things of God through which the things of God are out of the world from the creature

 there is, however, another way for the things of God, which is to walk all, but easier, shorter, and more fruitful. It was in this path that the divine Dionysius established the perfection of the other virtues, using the 8 method of the feelings in his operations. This path rises by aspirations rather than by meditations. And whereas there are many branches of this path, it will be useful, for the sake of saving time, to have a brief guide to it.

Chapter II

In the beginning one should prepare oneself for this practice in the following manner, taking half a year, more or less, according to the degree ~~amount~~ of ~~one's~~ ^{made} progression. At the beginning of his exercises a man will ~~review~~ ^{sum up} ~~the~~ ^{the} volume of divine love, gathering together the proofs of love, all and singular, which Christ has shown to us, both ^{according to} ~~in~~ his divinity, & ^{according to} ~~in~~ his humanity, for the kindling of a fire within the heart, and especially for the bringing to mind of the Lord's passion. This should be in three ways. According to blessed Bernard, one method is that of sympathy - a method for beginners. Another is to ~~move~~ spur oneself ^{on} towards true imitation & - this is for those approaching perfection. For in the process of becoming perfect we find all the virtues reflected, viz. unfathomable humility, incomprehensible gentleness, patience beyond human computation, and so with the other ^{several} virtues which shone forth in His passion.

Thirdly, there is the method of contemplating that exalted charity which constrained Him to suffer so horrible a death, ~~from~~ ^{by} which the ~~seeker~~ ^{adept} after perfection will be brought to regard the divine nature itself as accomplishing all those things by a kind of internal love, from love of the human race. This is for those who are now perfect. And thus he who desires to arrive at perfection in these exercises will direct his attention and his contemplation ^{firstly} chiefly to the cause, in order that he may be so kindled; secondly to the manner, that he may be impelled to imitation; thirdly to the work, that he may be even joined in it.

Chapter iii.

Howsoever in all the exercises the aspirant ~~must~~ must take diligent heed not to employ any one exercise with peculiar frequency; but he must keep ^{and assiduous} anxious watch in his introspections for the impulses of the Holy Spirit, who in many and divers modes kindles to water fire the spirit of man that so all its powers may be united to one end and drawn on towards love. Therefore in what-soever direction the divine goodness may ~~have~~ most liberally have impelled him, he will adapt the sequence of his exercises to the following of that lead. For all his exercise will be for the ~~the~~ increasing of that flame which at the beginning cannot be kindled by the ~~first~~ spontaneous movement of the heart toward God without previous meditation and contemplation of the divine love. So we see in building with arches that at first timbers are placed beneath and the wall built solid above; then, when the superstructure is firm, the timbers are withdrawn from below.

 Similarly, after this exercise of love has been practiced for some time, in the end the heart, without preparatory meditation will kindle toward God at will, immediately, and by the first motion of mind and soul. Now this kindling is the one instrument and root of this path of justice. From it will rise both stock and branch of the whole tree of all perfection, which is called aspiration toward unifying love, by which the soul of the faithful aspires with fiery longing to be united by means of love with the infinite love, which is God, and to be utterly absorbed in it. And this aspiration toward unifying love is to be urged forward with the utmost vehemence of spirit, in such wise that ecstasy is felt and great pain because ~~the~~ the soul is not yet accustomed or qualified to sustain such have not usually been called him, he will say the nature of his exercises. The following of that and the other exercises will be for the purpose of that. There is at the beginning of the method of the first a distinction between the hand. There is without further distinction and the nature of the exercise. To see in history with order that at first. There are three kinds and the one with which order; the other the other nature is for, the nature are without a few nature, after this exercise of one has been provided for some time, at the end, without the nature of the first. There are three at will, immediately, and by the first. There is and not the nature in the one instrument. and not of the part of nature. There is with one with order and part of the whole time of one perfect, and is called repetition towards unity and by that the one of the faithful order with from saying to be said by one of the with the nature, and is for, and the other, should in it. And this repetition towards unity is to be made forward with the utmost of spirit, it is not more that order is felt and part for because the one is not get accustomed or qualified to sustain exercise. It is hardly believable what things thence arise in a body not yet adapted to this practice, especially in those who vigorously pursue this exercise of unifying love. But for the sake of brevity I pass over these matters.

Chapter ~~III~~ IV

On the mode of practising love.

For the sake of attaining to the custom of practising unifying love, the faithful soul, in whatsoever place and time, walking, sitting, lying, even eating, should become accustomed to send forth mental aspirations ~~to~~ toward love, and sometimes vocal as well, forming them into the prayers called by Augustine ejaculatory, and saying: "O my love; O sole hope of mine; O my entire refuge and my desire; most loving Jesus, would that I may be found worthy that my soul should enjoy Thy most sweet embrace; nay, that Thou in it and it in Thee may be refreshed by mutual embracing, that so it's ~~may~~ ~~be~~ ~~violently~~ ~~inflamed~~ lukewarmness may be violently inflamed by the fire of Thy immeasurable love; O soul of my soul; O life of my soul; Thou art my ~~only~~ ^{whole} desire; I offer my whole self to Thee Thy whole self, one to one, one only to one only; would that in me may be fulfilled Thy

The book is interesting about things there given in a lot of detail to the especially in those who are of importance. But for the sake of brevity I have not written more than this.

Chapter III

At the end of the book for the sake of brevity I have written less, the fact that and the, which, which, which, which become necessary to the
 for the sake of brevity I have found them in the pages called by epistolary, and so on; I have life of mine; I have written best of my power, and I have found nothing that I had most of my power; and I have it in the way of the book written, that is to say, in the written, and I have written part of my power; I have and I have written; and I have whole self, and I have means that is the way of the prayer to the Father in which Thee saidst: ' Father, I beseech Thee that they may be one as We are one, I in them and Thou in Me, that they may be joined in one ' ". And other such prayers without number, which the ~~dead~~ devout soul many times repeats. Rightly they are called aspirations. And this is the first exercise in every path to perfection.

Chapter ~~IV~~ V

When a man feels himself inflamed and draws upward then all the images lodged in the intellectual part of his nature are to be relinquished however noble they may ~~some~~ seem and however useful for inflaming the soul, whether they are of the divine bounty, goodness, power, wisdom, and so on; for the mind itself, ~~when~~ when filled to its depths with the fire of love, presses with lively haste on through these on till it arrives at the inner silence.
 Here there is no operation of the man himself, for God alone works; the human spirit is ~~active~~ passive and God active. And though at such a time divers exercises make their claim upon the soul, yet all are for the moment to be repealed and simply put aside, while the soul papers to the father is what they want. father, I believe, that they want to see as we are one, I in them and there is the that they may be found a one, and other such papers without number, which the about about 2000 and some letters. Rightly they are called a letter. And this is the first exercise in every book to perfection.

Chapter VII

When a man falls himself in the way and shows upward then all the images and the intellectual part of the letters are to be religiously written under the eye and seen and received useful for the history of the soul, which they are of the divine beauty, beauty, power, reason, and so on for the kind itself, when the father to the father with the force of love, power with love, love with power, then in all it comes at the inner sphere.
 There is no operation of the man himself,
 for God alone works; the human spirit is active passive and God active. And though at last a time when exercises make their claim upon the soul, yet all are for the benefit of the intellect and simply put aside, which the soul follows its inward motions & hastens its onward progress towards God. And since ~~from then on~~ thenceforth the Holy Spirit teaches concerning all those things that are transacted between the divine and the human spirit, I forbear to proceed. This exercise, then, of unifying love, which is hidden from many, is the beginning of all perfection, because by that love all temptations to faults is consumed. Hence Peter & Ravennas^a say: "It is a tender and delicate warfare to gain the victory over all vices by love alone. That love is also a fountain of all virtues up to the highest perfection, since it constrains a man to aspire towards every manner of divine likeness in the fullest mortification of all vices and the most perfect acquisition of all virtues."

Chapter v

On the four branches, or Companion exercises Unifying love is the most fertile and perfect tree in the perfection of the traveller.
 It should be adorned with four branches, that is to say, four accompanying exercises, and these are: Giving, demanding, conforming, uniting.
 Firstly, the aspirant must give everything, whatever the divine spirit can exact spiritually follows the inward migration & return of the higher towards the lower. The lower therefore the higher spirit teaches concerning the true things that are connected between the higher and the lower spirit, I prefer to proceed. The exercise, then, of unifying base, which is taken from above, is the beginning of all perfection, because by that base all perfection is built in course. Hence Peter's reasoning says: "It is a ladder and delicate because to gain the ladder over all error by one alone. That base is also a fountain of all virtues of the highest perfection, since it contains a man to confer toward every manner of virtue which is in the highest manifestation of all virtues and the most perfect representation of the nature."

Chapter V

On the four branches, or comparative exercises unifying base is the most perfect and perfect base in the perfection of the branches.
 It should be carried with four branches, that is to say, four accompanying exercises, and these are: first, the unifying, conforming, uniting, finally, the highest must give every thing, whereas the divine spirit can exact spiritually.

by internal inspiration, especially ^{the} perfect complete renunciation and putting aside of all sensual and evil delights by which the soul is ensnared and stained: inordinate affections, much speaking, vain speaking, sloth, vain company, the pleasures of eating and drinking, and so on. There must be complete mortification of the natural passions, namely foolish joy, inordinate sadness, inordinate fear, vain hope, desire for worldly honour, and so forth. The heart must be kept raised above all multiplicity and all occupations, as being established in God and removed from all the changes of human affairs. No adversity may be feared, no prosperity grasped at. To attain this the gentile philosophers laboured: how much more, then, Christians, and, above all, the religious? And so one may pass on confidently to the second exercise, which is demanding. He must demand from God not only all that he has but all that is. However is all that he does he must never demand from God anything for enjoyment but only for use. That is, he must never rest content with God's gifts, how great soever, but only use them for the attainment of greater perfection. Thus whatever God of internal respiration, especially, ^{the} perfect complete respiration and further cause of all disease and evil conditions of which the soul is caused and stored: intricate affections, much speaking, vain speaking, stultic & vain wisdom, the business of eating and drinking, and so on.

 There must be complete satisfaction of the return to business, namely, foolish joy, inordinate reason, intricate fear, vain hope, desire for worldly honors, and so forth. The heart must be kept pure above all multiplicity and all occupations, as being established in God and as being free of the changes of human affairs.
 In converse with the heart, no human heart capable of to obtain this the gentle philosophic labors: this must be done, the Christian, and above all, the religious? And to one day face or confidently to the human creature, which is necessary. The heart seems for God and only all that he has let all that is. However is all that he has in hand.
 There seems for God and nothing for himself but only for me. That is, the most severe but content with his gift, has great power, but only in them for the other. want of greater perfection. Thus wisdom for may have given him he will always think too little for him, and will always remain hungry. For many, by resting satisfied with the gifts and graces they have received, have the rather cooled from their desire of progress. Therefore it is safer ~~only~~ to ask only those things which lead to true perfection — that is, the divine grace, and above everything naked and intense charity, and that the divine bounty may illuminate the mind ^{to} the most true knowledge of self, that is, of one's own evilness and nothingness, and of God, that is, ~~chiefly~~ and firstly and chiefly the divine pleasure, for the doing of it.

The next is the third exercise: Conforming. That is, a man must endeavour to fashion himself according to the likeness of Christ's humility, in all the virtues which most chiefly shine forth in His most despised, most painful, most bitter passion; and especially to imitate Him with all his strength in the love of deepest humiliations and ~~evilness~~ ^{ignominy}.

Let him not think that he can attain to those virtues by his own exercises, but let him ~~then~~ ~~the beginning~~ when that unifying love begins to rise in his breast let him demand them from God ~~with~~ with ardent yearnings.

p

... the first, then he will always think too little for him, and will always remain hungry. For many, by making confession with the gifts and grace they have received, have the latter coveted for their desire of progress. Therefore it is safer only to eat only those things which lead to true perfection - that is, the true good, and above everything, modest and intense charity, and that the desire should be of the the more for the more knowledge of self, that is, of our own weakness and insufficiency, and of God, that is, of His greatness and beauty, the divine presence, for the glory of it.
The next is the third exercise: Confession.
That is, a man must be conscious to fashion himself according to the likeness of Christ himself, in all the virtues which are most valuable in His most beloved, most perfect, most loving passion; and especially to imitate Him with all His strength in the love of perfect benevolence and let him not think that he can attain to this virtues by his own exertions, but let him the rejoicing also that nothing has been I see in his heart let he be content then from God will grant progress.

The fourth is ~~off~~ knitting - uniting his will with the divine will without any reserve of the heart. Whatever adversity may happen to him either in time or eternity, he should, with inward and heartfelt acceptance, offer himself generously to God, that so the divine pleasure may become his supreme desire. ^{This he should do whether} ~~and similarly~~ if there be external adversities, as illness, persecutions, contempt, reviling, scandal, and so forth, or whether there be internal adversities, such as withdrawal of the influence of divine grace, clouding of the mind & sense, coolness of the affections, vain temptations. At such times he will be anxious chiefly to be found faithful to his Beloved, well knowing that his Beloved is doing these things, or permitting them for the proof of his fidelity, and for the enriching him, when found faithful, with His goods and graces. And so at such times he should take especial heed not to fall back and not to seek comfort in vain or in useful occupations, but yet not to sink into sloth but always to assiduous as far as he can in good exercises and works. For though good works and exercises may for the time have lost their savour, yet they are pleasing to God and meritorious in us if we do what we can. Similarly with regard to things eternal: let him freely yield himself to the divine pleasure, even if it were God's will to place him in Hell eternally — by way of punishment; that is, not by way of separation from the divine will and charity. And though this seems difficult, since nature altogether abhors such a doom, yet by multiplied desires, and by the divine grace poured gradually upon the soul, ~~it~~ ^{nevertheless} becomes ~~possible~~. Indeed ~~the man~~ a man may nevertheless ~~arrive~~ at this reach a point at which he will ~~promptly and liberally~~ offer himself to undergo all the penalties of Hell as ~~promptly~~ readily and as ~~freely~~ freely as to enter eternal glory and the joys of the ~~blest~~ blest. Here it must be noted that when a man finds himself to have reached a certain point in the acquisition of some virtue, namely in the humble discarding of himself, or in the resignation ^{ing} of himself to eternal punishment for the sake of the divine love, and ~~so~~ so on — when he feels himself so devoted to that virtue that without any ~~recalcitrance~~ ^{recalcitrance} of the heart, that is, of the sensual nature, ~~he~~ ^{his rational will} can offer himself ^{itself} liberally ~~to the will of divine reason~~, even at a time of the withdrawal of grace — then let him know that by the divine bounty he has attained that virtue in full measure. But if his rational will offers itself voluntarily while the natural will still opposes, it is a sign that the virtue is as yet insufficiently aroused by ardent longings. Thus these four exercises should be practised according to their seasons, and that in the following manner, which is set forth that the simple may have a practical guide.

Chapter VII

On the practice of the four above-mentioned exercises.

As soon as a man feels the fire of the heart kindled he should first lay upon it all his shortcomings, that is, every vice — not, however, see taking his faults one by one, but making one parcel of all his imperfections he will cast it upon that infinite fire of the divine love, that all may be consumed. Then let him offer liberally all things whatsoever that God may require of him in time or eternity. And if at first the sensual nature rebels let him move the less make the offer with his rational will. Then let him demand of God what He is and what

The others that vote in full measure. But if the voters vote off on their own the voters vote off on their own that the voters in an off insufficient amount by about 1000. The three four exercises should be practiced according to their system, and that in the following manner, which is not felt that the people have a practical guide.

Chapter VII

In the practice of the four exercises exercises. to see as a rule the first of the first practice the second first day after it all the advantages, that is, every vote it, however, and taking his points are by one, but making one parcel of all his perfection to not cost of when that in finite time of the choice have, that all may be considered. Then let him open himself, all things whatsoever that God or any degree of him in time or eternity. about if at first, the general nature of but have more the less will for often with his retirement with them let him vision and of God what he is and what He has. That is, let him first demand and beg from Him the purest illumination of the mind for the knowing of himself truly, namely, his own weakness and nothingness. And further for the knowing fully the divine pleasure and the doing it faithfully.

 To this end he should offer himself with no recalcitrance of heart, ~~not~~ as ready in everything as the shadow which moves to the moving of the object which casts it. For the divinity is a light, humanity an object shone upon, our will a shadow. Thus as the shadow moves with the motion of what casts it, so our will must ~~to~~ move in conformity with the life of Christ. And this is conforming. In this shadow the most sweet fruit of the Spirit himself is enjoyed. I sat (says he) beneath the shadow of Him whom I desired, and his fruit was sweet to my taste. And so a man must aspire with all his might toward conformity with the life of Christ in virtues demanding, with flashing desires, that God will deign to adorn his soul with those same virtues. For virtues are acquired much more speedily by flaming prayers than by exercises. From these beginnings, here briefly stated and as it were collected into

The fact that it is, for our first lesson and we from the the present illustration of the mind for the history of himself that, namely, his own existence and his progress. His father for the present fully the divine pleasure and the changed faithfully to the end he should offer himself with a satisfaction of heart, not as a duty in itself as the others who are to be honored of the object of his love. For the divine is a light, present in object that is, and not a shadow. Thus as the others were with the notion of that God is, so our work was to have a conformity with the life of Christ. And this is conformity. In this shadow the best part of the spirit himself is present. I do not say that the states of the other I desire, and his heart was sweet to my taste. And so a man must conform with all his might conformity with the life of Christ in order to be happy, with the feeling of himself, that God will be a man his will with these some states. For when we are required must more especially by feeling himself the in exercise. From these beginnings, there principles, states and so it were collected in One bundle, a man may ascend through unifying love to that uncreated charity which is God. So that there, the soul, as though melted, may receive a kind of impression, as from a seal, of all those things which it has sought from the Lord. And he shall have been frequent in such practices and shall have cleaved perseveringly to them, it were impossible that ~~such~~ such a man should not arrive at perfection of life. To the praise of our Lord Jesus Christ, to whom is honour and glory for ever and ever, Amen.

Here end the Exercise of unifying love, by brother Henry Step. A most useful guide to those striving after perfection of life. Written down by Andrew Boorde, through whom I beseech in the bonds of charity that you will pour out your prayers for him to Jesus.

14

The world, a man may seem through anything else to that uncorrected classic spirit in God. To that there, the soul, as though melted, may receive a kind of impression, as for a soul, of all these things which it has sought from the Lord, that he shall have been prepared in that position and shall have chosen himself, to them, it were impossible that they had ever been out of course of perfection of life. To the house of our Lord Jesus Christ, there is heaven and glory for ever and ever, Amen.

then and the exercise of his life led, by further things, to that perfect given to them, after perfection of life. Better than the three boards, that when I heard in the house of Christ, that you will have out your prayers for him to give.

#252320899

