

Handwritten Persian calligraphy in a dense, overlapping style, likely a form of 'Sema' or 'Sema' script. The text is written in black ink on a light brown background, framed by a red border. The script is highly stylized and difficult to decipher, but it appears to be a collection of verses or a specific form of poetry. The text is arranged in several columns, with some lines being longer than others, creating a complex, layered appearance. The overall composition is dense and visually striking due to the intricate flourishes and the way the lines overlap.
